Programme of the Races for To-day.

The racing at Jerome Park yesterday was in every respect superb. It was indeed the perfection of sporting in this department, and was quite as enjoyable and as thoroughly enjoyed by thousands who know and care little about fast horses, as by adepts and devotees of that particular pastime. The character of the course and the lavish care and expense bestowed upon everything which forms part of the entertainment, if continued, cannot fail to make the races at this Park among the most attractive features of life in the metropolis. It is, to begin with, just the right distance for a drive,—about ten miles from the upper part of the City,—and is reached by two of the best roads, leading through the most picturesque and delightful scenery, to be found in the neighborhood of New-York. Unlike the Paterson Course or those on Long Island, it involves the crossing of no ferry, and is subject to no interruption. One route crosses the Harlem River by Macomb's Dam, and follows a good, smooth country road, which will be made still more attractive when the grand Boulevard now in progress is completed, as it will be within a year. The other follows the hard, macadamized road by King's Bridge, which is lighted the whole distance. The drive alone, going by one road and returning by the other, is itself a most interesting and enjoyable experience.

The accommodations upon the ground are ample and complete. The grand stand is very large, very solid, completely sheltered from the rain and shaded by awnings from the sun. Refreshments of the best quality are afforded, intoxicating liquors being rigidly excluded. A very large force of the Metropolitan Police checks and prevents, by its simple presence, the slightest tendency to disorder. The peculiar shape of the track brings the horses at every step of the way under the immediate view of spectators upon the stand, while the open fields, rising hills and shady groves which surround the track offer excellent points of observation from the carriages which are scattered over them. The grounds of the American Jockey Club, reserved for the immediate use of members and their guests, are somewhat more secluded and do not offer so complete a view of the track itself; but a greater latitude in the matter of refreshments is provided, as lunches of cold chicken, ham, salads, &c., with champagne, can be ordered at discretion. A prominent feature of this course is the special facilities afforded those who cannot afford or who do not choose to pay for admission to the grounds. The track is surrounded by an open picket instead of a close board fence, as is usual in such cases, and one of the finest hill-sides on the whole ground, covered with a beautiful grove, is especially surrendered to this class of spectators. Mr. JEROME's theory in this was that enough persons would desire admission to all the privileges of the course to make it reasonably profitable, and that it would be mere churlishness to shut out others from a mere sight of the races. Experience is likely to vindicate the wisdom of this view of the case. On the first day of the races, although many thousand persons were present as gratuitous spectators, the sum taken at the gates lacked only a few hundreds of $17,000. Hundreds of mechanics and others attend with their families, bringing refreshments with them, and making a holiday excursion of the affair, with the additional attraction of fine racing thrown in. Indeed, the whole affair has more the aspect of a grand picnic, in which all classes are fully represented, each in its own style, and in the way best suited to its own tastes.

The attendance yesterday was very fine, though less numerous than on the first day. The novelty had worn off, the postponement for so long a time had rendered it impossible for many to remain who had designed to remain through the racing season, and the fact that Kentucky was not on the bills probably had also some effect. Not more than half as many were present within the inclosure as on Tuesday of last week. There was still a splendid show of carriages, and the whole scene was exceedingly lively and brilliant. The racing was much more spirited and interesting than on Tuesday, and as the detail of the management has got into better working order, everything went off in the most admirable and unexceptionable manner. The weather was absolutely perfect—the sun shaded by light fleecy clouds, a fresh, soft breeze keeping the air in motion yet causing no discomfort, and the ground free alike from dust and from moisture of the recent rains, combined to make one of the most delightful days of an American Autumn. A larger proportion of ladies were in attendance than on the previous day. Admiral FARRAGUT was present and received a cordial welcome wherever he went. We know no race-course in the world which offers greater attractions, or is likely to become more popular, than this.

THE FIRST RACE—THE NURSERY RACE.

The programme of the day announced four races, the first being the "Nursery Race," a dash of one mile, and confined exclusively to two year old colts and fillies, carrying 90 pounds each. For this race there were twenty-nine entries, but of this lot only six came to the post to contend for the rich prize that awaited the victor. It was expected that Mr. ALEXANDER, the distinguished Kentucky turfman, and extensive breeder of thoroughbred stock, would start the two two year olds Marion and Baywood, that he had sent on from the West to run specially in this race, but the same ill luck which prevented Asteroid from starting in the great four mile race against Kentucky, operated against him in this race; for Marion, who is full brother to Merrill, the winner of the last Jersey Derby, being by Lexington out of Bayleaf, and a youngster of exceedingly great promise, hit his leg in his gallop two days before, and injured himself so severely that he was obliged to be thrown out of training for the present. Baywood, by Lexington, dam Bayleaf, and the full brother to Benson and Bayswater, was Mr. ALEXANDER's second string, but being a big over-grown two-year old, it was found on trying him with Idlewild that his peculiar conformation and action was not adapted for going quickly around the turns of this course, and he also was withdrawn rather than encounter the chance of probable defeat. The prestige of some of the starters, such as Ruthless, Maid of Honor and Hampton Court, was so great that with the exception of the three above named, the colt by Colton out of Mollie Jackson, and two in Col. McDANIEL's stable, (a Breckinridge colt and a filly by Planet,) all the rest of the entrees were frightened away from starting. Of the above lot, Mr. MORRIS's b. f. Ruthless, by Eclipse out of Barbarity by Simoon, and his b. c. by Colton out of Mollie Jackson, enjoyed the greatest share of popular favor. Ruthless had run twice previously, having made her debut in the race for the Saratoga stakes, for two year olds only, this Summer, where she was backed at even against a field of nine starters; but getting off badly, she was unable to do better than gain second honors to Col. BUSH's Redwing, whom, however, she was overhauling at every stride. Three days afterward she turned the tables upon her previous victress by winning the two-year old dash of three-quarters of a mile in such magnificent style as to make her chances at the Nursery Race at this meeting exceedingly formidable. Her stable companion (by Colton, dam Mollie Jackson,) had never been stripped in public before, but report spoke highly of his speed and promise, and the result of the race showed that it was not unfounded. Maid of Honor, an English filly imported along with Hampton Court, by Mr. R. W. CAMERON, of this City, was held next in estimation, her previous performances having been of a high order. She made her début in the two-year old stake at Paterson Spring meeting, in which a gray colt by Eclipse, dam Fidelity, belonging to Mr. MORRIS, was engaged, and so highly thought of that he was freely backed at even against the field. He got considerably the best of the start, and looked like winning in a canter, but the Maid of Honor came with such a rush in the last few strides that she beat him cleverly by a length, her stable companion, Hampton Court, gaining third place. At Saratoga the Maid was obliged to be content with second place to Ruthless, she having been previously sold to Mr. BELMONT for the sum of $5,000, and in whose colors she ran yesterday. Hampton Court showed himself a first-class racer by beating Mr. HUNTER's ch. f. Flora McIvor, in a match for $1,000, dash of a mile, over a heavy track, and giving her 8 pounds, in 1 minute 53 seconds, on the last day of the Saratoga meeting, and this performance made many fancy him yesterday. None of the others had ever run before, and their chances of winning might be estimated by that turf barometer the pool selling. Mr. MORRIS' entry (Ruthless and Mollie Jackson colt) sold for $700; Maid of Honor, $310; Hampton Court, $200; READ's, $95; Mr. McDANIEL's, $60. The outside betting was $100 to $70 on MORRIS against the field.

THE RACE.

A capital start was effected, Maid of Honor, who is trained in Mr. WATSON's stable, at once carrying Mr. BELMONT's colors to the front, and at a rattling pace making the running, with Mr. MORRIS' pair in immediate attendance, and the others in a ruck. At the quarter-pole the positions of each were more distinctly defined, for the Maid was a length before the Mollie Jackson colt, Ruthless as far behind, the Breckinridge colt fourth, the Planet filly next, and Hampton Court, who had been run into and nearly knocked over by Col. McDANIEL's filly at the turn, last. Disappearing round the foot of the bluff for a few moments, Ruthless was seen when they again came in view close at Maid of Honor's saddle-girths, and her stable companion in near proximity; Hampton Court, who had passed the other two, being now fourth. At the three-quarter pole on the home-stretch turn, Ruthless challenged the Maid, defeated her in a few strides, and galloping along as if she was at exercise, opened such a gap that she crossed the score six lengths in front, in the extraordinary fast time of 1.49, a performance unprecedented in the two-year old time record, when the state of the track is considered. Maid of Honor was second, two lengths before the Mollie Jackson colt, and Hampton Court a bad fourth.

FIRST RACE.—The "Nursery Race" for two-year olds, dash of one mile, carrying 90 pounds—29 entries.

F. Morris entered b. f. Ruthless, by Eclipse, dam Barbarity	1
R. W. Cameron entered b. f. Maid of Honor, by Newminster, dam Himmalaya	2

R. W. Cameron entered b. c. Hampton Court, by Young Melbourne, dam Durindana	4
T. B. Read entered b. c., by Breckinridge, dam Bonnie Scotland	5
D. McDaniels entered ch. f., by Planet, dam Carolina	6

Time—1:49.

THE SECOND RACE—TWO-MILE HEATS.

The race for the youngsters over, the horses engaged in the two-mile heat contest were at once summoned on the course. There were four entries, all of them well-known horses of the highest class. They were Arcola, Julius, Knighthood and Delaware. Although Arcola had once defeated the game and honest Fleetwing and others in a two-mile heat race, yet he laid under the suspicion of being wanting in gameness and endurance. His speed is undeniable, and at any distance under a mile and a half he has hitherto been invincible. But his defeat by Julius, in a mile and three quarter race, at the last Saratoga meeting, when his too sanguine backers laid the most extravagant odds on him, made the public suspicious of him in this longer and more severe contest, and Delaware was installed first favorite in the pools. Delaware is a good, sound, honest horse, with a great turn of speed, and undeniable game, and his defeat yesterday can only be attributed to the slow run race, which just suited Arcola, whose jockey, CHARLES LITTLEFIELD, rode him in the most masterly style, and with the finest judgment. Knighthood did not look in tip-top condition, for the heavy work he has recently done has left its impression. He ran the good, honest horse he undoubtedly is, and had ABE obeyed orders in the second heat, of waiting and leaving Arcola and Delaware to fight it out between them, the result might have been different. ABE, however, finding himself in possession of a strong lead, thought it best to go for the heat, and the tremendously severe finish killed his horse for the deciding heat. Julius had been lame some time before, but had apparently recovered, for he ran well in the race, but could not repeat his Saratoga feat of beating Arcola. The latter, since Mr. MINER took charge of him, has improved vastly, and the superb condition in which that skillful trainer sent him to the post yesterday, doubtless enabled him, combined with the artistic manner in which he was ridden, to achieve his unexpected victory. In the pools the horses sold as follows: Delaware, $1,500; Arcola, $1,100; Knighthood, $430; Julius, $375. The outside betting was $100 to $50 the field against Delaware.

FIRST HEAT.—A good start, Julius first showing in front at the turn, with Arcola and Delaware in attendance, and Knighthood last. Passing the quarter pole Julius was a length before Arcola, and Delaware as far behind the latter. Rounding the base of the bluff, they disappeared from view, but when again visible their relative positions were the same. Coming up the homestretch Arcola closed up a little, and as they passed the string on the first mile, they were neck and neck together. Time, 1:59. The slow running showed that they all had waiting orders, and none of them attempted to improve the pace, the quarter and half-mile poles being passed in the same order, LITTLEFIELD on Arcola waited patiently until entering the straight run home, when he challenged Delaware, who had passed Julius, raced with him a few strides, shook him off easily, and won cleverly and easily by two lengths in 3:50¼. Delaware was second, six lengths before Julius.

SECOND HEAT.—The pool sales showed that Arcola's victory was regarded as highly probable, for he brought $420, Knighthood $170, Delaware $120, and Julius $55. Knighthood went off at a clipping pace, closely attended by Delaware, Arcola getting off badly. They ran in this order throughout the first mile, Knighthood being a length before Delaware as they crossed the string, and Julius two lengths behind the latter, with Arcola at his saddle girths. Time, 1:55. The second mile was run in the same way, Arcola unable to get up when he made his effort, and the race was left to Knighthood and Delaware, the latter after one of the brilliant finishes ever seen on the turf, in which wihpcord and steel were freely used, both horses responding nobly, winning by half a neck only in 3:46¼. Arcola was third, a length before Julius.

Third Heat.—Complete revulsion in the betting, as it was the general opinion that Arcola was dead beat, and could not possibly win another heat. Some few stuck to him, and others hedged by buying him to cover themselves from loss. In the pools Delaware sold for $1,250, Arcola $210, Julius $210, and Knighthood $185. Delaware this time took the lead, with Julius second and Arcola last, apparently out-paced In this way they ran the first mile, Delaware a length before Knighthood, who was as far before Julius. Coming round again, the hopes of Arcola's backers, now at zero, were raised by seeing him on the third quarter rapidly join his horses, pass Knighthood, and take his place at Julius' quarters. With admirable patience Littlefield worked until entering the straight, when he called upon Arcola for a final effort, and the gallant horse nobly answered, for he cut down Julius in a few strides, and challenging Delaware defeated him, after a magnificent struggle, by a neck, in 3.52¼ Julius third and Knighthood last. The owner and his jockey received a complete ovation of well-deserved applause.

SUMMARY.

SECOND RACE.—Two mile heats, all ages.

J. Hunter's b. c. Arcola, 5 years	1	4	1
J. S. Watson's b. c. Delaware, 4 years	2	1	2
D. McDaniel's b. c. Julius, 4 years	3	3	3
J. W. Weldon's b. c. Knighthood, 4 years	4	2	4

Time—3:50¼; 3:46¼; 3:52¼.

THE THIRD RACE—SELLING RACE.

This was a mile and a half dash for horses of all ages, and was run for Richmond ch. m. by Knight of St. George, dam Zenith, and a Vandal filly. The race was regarded as a certainty for Richmond, for he won it easily by twenty lengths in 2:51.

THIRD RACE.—Selling race, for all ages, mile and a half dash. Horses entered to be sold for $2,500; to carry their appropriate weight—$1,000, 12 lbs.:

R. Arnsley's gr. c. Richmond	1
J. W. Pennock's ch. f., by Vandal	2
D. McDaniel's ch. m., by Knight of St. George	3
R. W. Marshall's gr. c. Fordham	dis.

Time—2:51.

FOURTH RACE—POST STAKE.—This was a dash of three miles, for all ages, carrying 100 lbs. each, except three year olds, which carry 90 lbs. The entries and starters were Idlewild, Aldebaran, Climax, Loadstone and Fleetwing. Idlewild was the favorite, bringing $610, Aldebaran $590, Climax $300, Fleetwing $300 and Loadstone $105. Loadstone led for the first two miles, when he fell back into the rear, and Idlewild took up the running with Aldebaran, (who had been far in the rear until now,) laying second, Fleetwing third, and Climax fourth. At the half-mile pole, on the last mile, Aldebaran rushed past Idlewild, was never afterward approached, and won with great ease by four lengths, Idlewild three lengths before Fleetwing, and Loadstone last of all.

FOURTH RACE.—Post stake, three mile dash, carrying 100 pounds each.

J. S. Watson's ch. g. Aldebaran	1

THE PROGRAMME FOR TUESDAY.

To-day there are three very interesting races on the programme, comprising a hurdle race for which there are five entries; a mile heat race, the Jerome race for three-year olds, for which the entries are Bayswater, Watson, Enchantress, Dot, Ulrica and Local, and a dash race of a mile and three-quarters for beaten horses. In the three-year old race, Mr. Alexander's entry (he can only start one of the two) sold for as much as the others combined; Ulrica was the first choice, with Dot, Enchantress and Local in the order named. A capital day's racing may be confidently anticipated.

OUT DOOR SPORTS.

The Great Base Ball Match at Philadelphia—The Atlantics, of Brooklyn, vs. The Athletics, of Philadelphia—The Game Interfered with by the Crowd, and Postponed till this Morning—The Betting.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Oct. 1.

The grand match between the celebrated Atlantic Club, of Brooklyn, and the equally celebrated Athletic Club, of this city—the first of a home-and-home series for the championship of the United States—was commenced in this city to-day, but owing to the dense crowd present, and the inefficiency of the Police, it was found impossible to proceed with the game, and the match was postponed till to-morrow morning.

For a number of weeks past this match has been a prominent subject of conversation in sporting circles, both in this city and the leading cities of the Union. Since the inception, a number of years ago, of the exciting contests for supremacy at the national game of base ball, the Atlantic Club has occupied a very prominent position among the leading clubs of the country, and their annual contests with the Mutual, Athletic and Eureka Clubs have attracted a great deal of attention. Last season they won every game in which they engaged; but this year, owing to dissensions in their ranks, they lost the first game of their matches with the Eureka and Irvington Clubs, of New-Jersey. The Athletic Club first attracted attention last year by their successful performance as a batting club. They made the best average of any club last season, and were only beaten by two clubs—the Atlantics and Actives. Their success this year has been still more marked, and up to the present time they have not met with a single defeat.

The Atlantics arrived in town yesterday evening, and were met at the railroad depot by a large delegation of their friends and admirers, among whom were members of the Athletic, Keystone, Olympic, Equity and other Clubs, whence they were escorted to the American Hotel, a favorite resort of the base-ball fraternity, which will be their headquarters during their stay in the city. A large delegation of the members and friends of the Club accompanied them, among whom we noticed quite a number of prominent Brooklynites.

Probably more money has been wagered on the result of this match than on any similar event in the annals of the game. In this city the odds have been on the Athletics, and as high as two to one were laid in many cases, but the general odds were 100 to 80. In Brooklyn and New-York the odds have been the other way.

Fully 30,000 people were present on the grounds at an early hour, every available spot being occupied. The greater portion of the crowd was outside the field, which was completely surrounded by a dense mass of human beings, backed up by vehicles of every description.

The Atlantics won the toss, and sent their opponents to the bat. KLEINFELDER, the first striker, went out on a fly-catch by CRANE. MCBRIDE and REACH then made runs. WILKINS went out at first base, and BERKENSTOCK struck out. PEARCE was the first striker for the Atlantics, and he hit a fine grounder between second and third bases, and got to his first. SMITH, second, sent a grounder to REACH, who fielded it to second in time to cut off DICKY. START struck a high ball to centre field and made his first, sending SMITH to third. CRANE was next to the bat, but before he had a chance to strike the game was stopped to allow the crowd to be cleared from the left field. Fully half an hour was taken up in the effort, but as soon as the crowd were put back on one side they pushed up on the other. The police were very inefficient, and seemed to be incapable of controlling the unruly mass. Seeing the utter uselessness of the effort to obtain a clear field, it was finally concluded to postpone the game till to-morrow.

This was a great disappointment to the thousands present—a great many of them having come long distances to witness the game. But it was perfectly futile to attempt to play without a clear field, and after a great deal of grumbling, and curses, not loud but deep, the crowd left the ground.

The betting all day before the game commenced was very brisk. The Brooklyn men came on with plenty of money, and fairly bluffed their opponents off in betting. Most of the money was laid out at evens, and it is estimated that fully $5,000 was wagered on the result of the game between the hours of 9 A. M. and 2 P. M., at the American Hotel.

It has been finally settled to play the game to-morrow morning, without giving any publicity to the matter.

E. L. G.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Oct. 1.

The Committee appointed by the Atlantic and Athletic Clubs held a conference meeting to-night, at which it was decided to play the first game on Monday week at the Capitoline Grounds, Brooklyn. To-morrow the Atlantic Club will play with the Keystone and on Monday with the Camden Club.

The disorder and rowdyism manifested at the Base-Ball match to-day are deeply regretted by the honorable members of the fraternity. It was chiefly caused, it is supposed, by the heavy betting of certain parties.

The Brigand Outbreak near Palermo.

In regard to the brigand outbreak at Palermo, a Florence telegram of the 19th says: "The official Gazette says that telegraphic communication with Palermo being intercepted, the Government possesses no direct intelligence of the exact condition of the interior of the city. Information received from the authorities of localities in the vicinity of Palermo, the States Royal troops occupy the Palace, the prisons, the Customs offices, Castellaman and the port. The steam corvette Tancredo commanded the neighborhood of the prisons. The population had not taken part in the movement. A portion of the National Guard, which had been able, had assembled to render assistance. Good feeling prevailed, and the National Guard of various places had offered their services to the Government in the environs of Palermo. Fifteen hundred troops disbanded at Palermo yesterday, and other reinforcements have been sent from Leghorn and Ancona. A squadron of eight vessels arrived at Palermo on the 19th.

A royal decree had been issued appointing Gen. CADORNA commander of the military forces in Sicily, and Commissioner Extraordinary of the King in the City and Province of Palermo.

THE FRANCO-MEXICAN CONVENTION

Preparations for the Withdrawal of the French Troops.

A Paris letter of Sept. 15, says: "The Convention passed between the French and Mexican Governments, conceding to the former half the Custom-house revenues of the ports located on the Atlantic, and one-fourth of those of the harbors on the Pacific, has been looked upon on the French Bourse as securing the Mexican debt, and has caused a sudden rise in Mexican bonds. The holders of these bonds, encouraged, by the guarantee just obtained, maintain that France is, by that Convention, entitled to require, at all times, from MAXIMILIAN, or his successors, the payment of all amounts hitherto disbursed for Mexico, including the loans which these bonds represent.

The publication of that Convention in the Moniteur, happening concurrently with the appointment of Gen. DE CASTELNAU, Aide-de-Camp to the Emperor, and M. DE GALLIFET, an administrator of great ability, has naturally been construed as the forerunner of the entire abandonment of all direct intervention by France in Mexican affairs. Thus, whilst on one hand the aforesaid Convention settles all her financial claims, the removal of Gen. BAZAINE, of which you will hear ere long, and the appointment in his stead of Gen. DE CASTELNAU settles the military part of the question. The General goes to Mexico with no other mission than to arrange for the withdrawal of the French troops, and perhaps to give the benefit of his experience to the officers engaged in organizing the Mexican army. This is all. His task will necessarily be a short one, and does not imply on the part of the French Government the idea of giving any assistance to the Mexican Empire, which in London and Paris is looked upon as irretrievably lost. As to the Marquis of Galliiet, his presence in Mexico refers solely to the organization of the Custom-house system and to the appointment of Custom-house officers, who are to be selected from among civil officers of French birth.

Feeling in Chili Favorable to the Continuance of the War with Spain—All Quiet in Peru.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Sunday, Sept. 23, 1866.

We have dates from Valparaiso and Santiago de Chili to the 2d, and from Callao and Lima to the 14th inst.

CHILI.

The sentiment of the people and press of Chili is clearly for the continuance of the war with Spain, but the Press complains that the Government is waiting on its part, certain that time and patience will overcome this feeling of the people. In this, without doubt, the Government is wise.

Another war steamer, the Isabella, purchased in the United States for the Chilian navy, had arrived at Valparaiso. When she belonged to the United States navy she carried two nine-inch guns, two thirty-pound Parrots, four eighteen-pounders, and one twenty-pound gun.

The Government continues slowly to fortify the port of Valparaiso, and to mount guns for defence against another attack of the Spanish fleet, but the works will not be of sufficient magnitude and strength to resist a well-organized and well-handled modern fleet. The Valparaiso papers boast that the fort will soon be defended by 150 cannon.

President PEREZ has been declared reëlected President of Chili by the Chilian Chambers.

Admiral BLANCO has resigned his position as Chief of the Chilian fleet, and Commodore TUCKER, late of the rebel navy, has been formally installed as second in command of the allied Chilian and Peruvian fleet.

PERU.

There is nothing of importance from Peru. A movement is on foot to ameliorate the horrors of the Coolie trade, which, as the civilized world will not stop it altogether, it is to be hoped will succeed. A Lima paper, in discussing the matter, naively remarks that it is not probable the Chinese will come to Peru in very great numbers if the whole truth is told them beforehand as to the hardships they will have to endure on the voyage, and as to the fate reserved for them in Peru. The same paper, while earnestly inviting labor into the country, makes a lame attempt to excuse the late cruel expulsion of hundreds of Spanish laborers and artisans from Chili, Bolivia and Peru—the most industrious and quiet of all the foreign element of those Republics.

The Peruvian journals think it certain that the Spanish Government intend to renew hostilities, in which they are doubtless right, for it is not to be supposed the Spaniards intend to remain passive while they are constantly threatened with war from their enemies. "From Guayaquil to the Straits," says the paper in question, "every one is prepared to meet the contest with success. The glorious days of the nation will be repeated, and now, as ever, our obstinate enemy will receive the punishment he so well deserves."

The election for President of Peru will soon take place. No doubt the Dictator PRADO will be elected.

The cotton crop promises to be abundant this year.

The Archbishop of Lima having announced a jubilee without asking the permission of the Government, the Executive has castigated the chief of the Church by a suspension of his temporalidades.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

We have dates from Guatemala and Salvador to the 6th, from Nicaragua to the 8th, and from Costa Rica to the 10th instant. There is no news. The five States are tranquil. The coffee crops of Guatemala and Costa Rica promise to be large. In the former State the culture of coffee is increasing rapidly.

The Feeling in Favor of War—Chili, Bolivia and Peru—The Spanish Squadron—Mixed Marriages.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

SANTIAGO, Chili, Saturday, Sept. 1, 1866.

By the steamer Zimenia, which arrived at Valparaiso on the 27th ult., we have received news of the downfall of the O'Donnell Ministry. Private letters received by same mail, inform us that one of the first acts of the new Ministry will be to bring to a close the war in the Pacific, for which object it will send legations to Chili and Peru, under the direction of TAVIRA and ALBISTUR. It is said also that the Spanish Government has already given orders to suspend the work on the ships which were to reinforce the squadron of MENDEZ MUNEZ.

THE WAR SPIRIT.

The Chilians wish the Spaniards to renew the campaign. They are desirous of avenging the cowardly bombardment of Valparaiso. The present Government seems wanting in energy, and the people are becoming better aware of this important fact. The Press of the Capital, as well as that of Valparaiso, are unanimous in declaring that there is no solution of the question but by war. The Republica (Government organ) says: "But whatever may be the importance of these rumors, Chili ought not to be deceived by them, but continue her warlike preparations with all the energy and confidence which she has up to the present time displayed." The Ferro-carril (Opposition) says: "It appears to us that it is already too late for diplomacy. Since the bombardment of Valparaiso the war has assumed a character that a change of Ministry cannot modify. If O'DONNEL goes out, ISABELLA remains. Besides that crime has been applauded by the entire Spanish nation. * * * * Let us have nothing of this Anglo-French intervention, nor Yankee arbitration, which is perhaps the desire of Spain; because neither this arbitration nor that intervention will understand the exigence of our honor. After all, our impression is that peace is only a mirage. If Spain is disposed to negotiate, still she is not disposed to humiliate herself."

Such is the tone of the two principal papers of the capital, while those of Valparaiso are even for carrying on the war to the enemy's coasts.

The Spaniards are proud, and so are the Chilians: besides, there is Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador to treat with at the same time—a rather complicated affair. Now, to carry on an aggressive warfare money seems to be the grand necessity now-a-days. To meet this the Vice-President of the House of Representatives has presented a bill in Congress, which, becoming a law, will raise annually the sum of $7,300,000. The number of taxable people will be 80,000. 40,000 people will be taxed $25; 20,000, $50; 10,000, $100; 6,000, $300; 3,000, $500; and 1,000, $1,000. This bill was presented two days ago, and probably will be soon the subject of discussion in Congress. It has been favorably spoken of by all who are favorably disposed to an aggressive warfare.

The boundary question between Chili and Bolivia has been amicably settled. The treaty of alliance between Bolivia and Ecuador in which they respectively accept the same stipulation as that between Chili and Peru, has received legislative approbation. A new and liberal postage treaty has been made between this Government and that of Peru. The President of Chili has created eighteen scholarships in the National Institute, and offers six of these to each one of the Governments of the allied Republics. Still more to increase the good feeling already existing, they talk of establishing the free trade system with those nations who take up arms against Spain.

THE SPANISH SQUADRON.

We have private letters from Rio Janeiro, dated July 21, in which it is stated that a part of the Spanish squadron, consisting of the Villa de Madrid, Almansa and Blanca, are still remaining in that port and, it is said, waiting for reinforcements from Spain, to begin a new campaign in these waters in the coming Spring. The crews of these vessels are in a bad state indeed. So much have they been reduced by sickness, that on board of the Blanca and Villa de Madrid there are usually not more than twenty men fit for boat-work, or any other active labor. In one of the public hospitals of the city there are about one hundred of the sick of the Spanish fleet. On board of the Villa are some Chilians, who were made prisoners in the taking of the Paynete de Maul.

The steamer that arrived at Rio from the River Plate brought some seamen and four officers from the Spanish ships at Montevideo; of these officers two are from the Resolucion. By Montevidian papers we learn that Maj.-Gen. TOBO had arrived at that port, on his way to join the Resolution, at the Falkland Islands.

The Neshannock, with which many were so dissatisfied, (just because she did not happen to be an iron-clad,) some days ago took a trial trip with Admiral TUCKER on board. She steamed 13½ miles per hour with 35 pounds of steam, and every one appeared pleased with her, at least as to her speed. They are now taking down her luxurious state-rooms and otherwise at work to prepare her for a war vessel; she is to carry twelve heavy guns, and her name is to be the Aranco.

The handsome gunboat Poncas, formerly the Scioto, of the United States service, has arrived at Valparaiso. A part of her valuable cargo, consisting of guns, &c., is now being discharged; she brings ten pieces, two of which are 200-pounder Parrots, five are 100 and three 60-pounders.

The allied fleet now counts 150 guns and these of the heaviest calibre; it numbers sixteen vessels, not counting the Cherrokee, Pampero and Cyclon, which are yet to arrive, nor the Zoa, Victoria, (iron-clads,) and others which are to serve for the defence of Callao. The work of fortifying Valparaiso still continues.

Hon. THOMAS H. NELSON, Ex-Minister of the United States to Chili, it appears is not soon to be forgotten by the Chilian people. The Republica, a Government paper, says: "Receive, Mr. NELSON, in your temporal retirement, the sincere affection of all good Chilians, who pray for your felicity and that you may soon occupy in your country the high position which your talents and goodness make you worthy of."

MIXED MARRIAGES.

Notwithstanding the excitement natural to a nation in a state of war, we have not forgotten here that Chili is far from having arrived at the ultima thule in religious tolerance. Some three years ago Rev. DAVID TRUMBULL published several newspaper articles and a pamphlet on "Mixed Marriages," which caused some "squirming" among the national clergy, but which enlightened many minds on the demoralizing results of the present law. The German colonists in the southern part of Chili have sent in to Congress a paper containing their grievances, and petitioning Government to reform the law relating to it. The Patria, of Valparaiso, in an able editorial, calls loudly for reform, and is seconded by every other one, with the exception of the Indipendiente, a clerical organ, which, by its intolerance, would do honor to old Spain. Be it understood that in Chili a Protestant cannot marry a Roman Catholic except by abjuring his religious opinions, or paying a goodly number of dollars to the Pope, both of which have been done here on several occasions. Moreover, if a Protestant wishes to marry a Protestant, to make his marriage legal, he must pay the sum of $25 to the parish priest for a permit, and then he can be joined in wedlock by a Protestant minister. The Romanist himself does not escape exorbitant charges; even a poor native mechanic, if he has a decent coat on his back, must pay $12 or $14 or he cannot enter into these holy bonds. Perhaps the extravagant demands for the nuptial ceremony may help to account for the great number of illegitimates in this country. According to the statistics of 1863 there were born in Chili 52,687 children of lawful parentage, and 16,915 illegitimate! And this too in a country in which the "confessional" brings its influence into almost every domestic circle.

The Prussian residents in Valparaiso have a "Soldiers' Relief Association" for collecting money to remit to Europe for the benefit of the sick and wounded of the Prussian Army.

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

All Quiet—News from Bogota—Political Affairs—Ministers Appointed.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Sunday, Sept. 28, 1866.

We have dates from Bogota, the capital, to the 1st inst. The Republic is enjoying a season of peace, for a wonder no revolution being announced in any of the States. Five of the nine States, viz.: Tolima, Magdalena, Bolivar, Cauca and Boyaca, have given in their adhesion to the decree of President MOSQUERA on public order, which decree claims the right of the General to prevent State or local disturbances. Panama, Antioquia and Santander refuse their assent, but will doubtless be brought to think better of it, either by persuasion or force. The State of Cundinamarca, in which Bogota is situated, has as yet made no declaration on the subject. President MOSQUERA has decreed to be null and void some of the allowances for salaries, etc., by the old Government of OSPINA; and another decree declaring terminated the postal convention between Great Britain and the United States of Colombia, so that after the 1st of January next the British steamers to Colombian ports will be subject to tonnage dues, and the mails must be deposited in the post-offices of the Republic. The Government has also declared the coal mines of the State of Magdalena to be private property.

Señor MANUEL MARIA MOSQUERA has been appointed Colombian Minister to England and France, and Señor RAFAEL NUNEZ Minister to Belgium. The Minister to the United States, Señor SOLGAR, is in future to act only as the Fiscal Agent of the Government of Colombia there.

Panama is at present quiet, but awaiting with some trepidation President MOSQUERA's action on its refusal to accept his decree on public order, and for the disbandment of the State troops. One would think the Legislature, now in session in this city, expected great mortality the incoming political year among our rulers, for it has named five substitutes for the President of the State.

We are having a fine new hotel constructed on the Cathedral Plaza, which evidences prosperity among us, especially as we have already a good "first-class" hotel, and two or three minor ones.

We have no news from Australia this month—the Company having altered the time of sailing of their vessels from New-Zealand, so that they shall arrive here in future on the 4th of each month, instead of the 29th.

The United States double-enders Wateree and Mohongo and the store-ship Farallones are in this port, and the gunboats Florida and De Soto at Aspinwall.

The Rebellion in China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Monday, Oct. 1.

Advices from Shanghai of July 7 say the expeditions which the Government had sent against the robbers in Yong Chow, had, with one exception, failed.

Advices from Nanking report that two Imperial detachments had been defeated in Yang Chow, and the Viceroy had decapitated two Generals implicated in treasonable correspondence with the rebel leaders.

Mining shares are better. Imperial, $82; Yellow Jacket, $735; Chollar Potosi, $128; Ophir, $201.

Reception of the Southern Loyalists at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Monday, Oct. 1.

The reception of the delegation of Southern loyalists to-night was very enthusiastic. The Committee appointed by the Republican State Central Committee, composed of Gov. OGLESBY and Staff and other prominent gentlemen, met the delegation at Michigan City, and escorted them to the city. On the arrival of the train, a salute of 100 guns was fired. Several private residences on Michigan-avenue, and business houses on Lake-street, were brilliantly illuminated. Gov. OGLESBY delivered an address of welcome from the balcony of the Tremont House, which was responded to by C. H. BRANSCOMB, the Chairman of the delegation. The programme for to-morrow includes public speaking in Lake Park, and a torchlight procession at night.

MISSOURI.

Fair in St. Louis—Atlantic and Pacific Railroad—John C. Fremont Elected President of the Road—Market.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Oct. 1.

The Sixth Annual Fair of the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association opened to-day, and promises to be a proud success. All the departments are well filled, and entries are still being made. A large amount of stock of all kinds is on the ground, and some very fine horses and cattle are here from nearly every Western State. The grand feature of to-morrow will be the exhibition in the Amphitheatre of ninety thorough-bred horses now here to attend the Laclede races with their riders in full dress.

The Board of Commissioners of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company met here to-day, and organized by electing JOHN C. FREMONT President, D. R. GARRISON, of St. Louis, Vice-President, and CHAS. H. HOWLAND, of St. Louis, Secretary. There was a large attendance, the representatives of twelve States and Territories being present. The meeting was entirely harmonious. The capital of St. Louis and the West was strongly represented, and much zeal was manifested in regard to this great enterprise, which its projectors and friends aver will be the first constructed railway to the Pacific.

Alleged Mismanagement of the Freedmen's Bureau—A Swindler—Dedication of a Catholic Church—Markets.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Monday, Oct. 1.

Gen. TILLSON, at Griffin, is inquiring into the alleged mismanagement of the affairs of the Freedmen's Bureau by the agent at that point.

A fellow representing himself as a son of ARTHUR BARING, of Liverpool, purchasing cotton from the planters of Burke and adjoining counties, was arrested at Waynesboro, where he was detected passing fraudulent checks.

In consequence of the failure of the corn crop, planters are going West to procure a supply.

Cotton is advancing; sales, 450 bales middling, at 35 cents.

The Savannah market is active, middling 35c.@37c

The Charleston market is unsettled; sales 201 bales middling at 36c.

The new Catholic Church was dedicated yesterday by Bishop LYNCH. The rebuilding of the cathedral will be pushed forward.

LOUISIANA.

Crop Prospects in the State—Advance in Cotton—Deaths by Yellow Fever and Cholera.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, Oct. 1.

Crop prospects continue to improve, except in the alluvial region along the Mississippi River, and in places heretofore free from the army worm. The crop of sugar-cane will be large, but all who can will keep the cane to save themselves, or sell from plant cane. The crop of sugar will therefore be small. The Louisiana rice crop will be larger than ever before known.

Cotton advanced 1c.@1½c.; sales 2,400 bales; quotations nominal; receipts 1,939 bales. New-York Exchange ¼ discount. Sterling 57. Freights on cotton to New-York, ⅞c.; to Liverpool, ⅝d.

During the past 48 hours there have been 7 deaths by yellow fever and 30 by cholera.

CALIFORNIA.

Deaths from an Explosion—Peat in Nevada—Ship News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Monday, Oct. 1.

Two more persons scalded by the explosion on the steamer Julia died yesterday. Several others, who were supposed at first to be slightly injured, inhaled steam to such an extent that little hope of their recovery is entertained.

Ninety square miles of peat, lying from four to six feet deep, is reported to have been discovered in Humboldt County, Nevada.

Arrived, ship Washington, Capt. Berry, from New-York.

CONNECTICUT.

Municipal Elections—Republican Successes.

NORWALK, Monday, Oct. 1.

The Republicans carried their ticket for town officers to-day by a large majority.

WEST CORNWALL, Monday, Oct. 1.

The entire Union Republican ticket was elected in this town to-day by largely increased majorities.

MICHIGAN.

The National Horse Fair at Kalamazoo.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Monday, Oct. 1.

Up to 5 o'clock to-day two hundred and fifty of the finest horses in the country had been entered for the exhibition. The weather is fine.

THE PACIFIC.

Advices from Japan and Vancouver's Island.

SAN FRANCISCO, Monday, Oct. 1.

A private letter from Kanagawa, Japan, dated Aug. 20, says: "Tea is in fair demand for export, three vessels being on the berth for New-York. Prices average about $9 per picul higher than they were at the same season last year. Good middlings are quoted at $35 per picul; fine at $38@$40 per picul. Best silk is selling at $750 per picul. New-York Exchange is 4s. 5d."

A dispatch from Victoria, V. I., to-day, says a meeting was held last night to take into consideration the state of the Colony, and devise means for repealing certain laws. The proceedings were disorderly. Mr. McCLURE, M. P., denounced the course of the Government, and introduced a resolution that a petition be presented to the Home Government, asking that the Colony of Vancouver's Island be granted a responsible Government and reciprocity with the United States, and in case that failed that Her Majesty would make arrangements for the annexation of that Colony to the United States. Other speakers condemned these propositions.

Flour is firm and unchanged. Wheat a little easier but not quotably lower. Corn stronger at 75c.@80c. Oats firm and unchanged. Pork drooping, $33 25@$33 50. Bacon unchanged. Lard declining; prime leaf 19c. Whisky steady at $2 32.

THE DAAIS TRIAL.

No United States Court at Richmond.

FORTRESS MONROE, Monday, Oct. 1.

United States District-Attorney L. H. CHANDLER has arrived at Norfolk on his return from Washington, where he has been consulting with the Judicial authorities relative to the sessions of the District and Circuit Courts and the trial of JEFF DAVIS. He brought intelligence that no Court will be held to-morrow in Richmond, and has notified the members of the Grand and Petit Juries to this effect.

The Union Pacific Railroad.

PLUM CREEK, Nebraska, Monday, Oct. 1.

The Government Commissioners examined and accepted 35 miles more of the Union Pacific Railroad to-day. This makes 240 miles completed.

Letter from Admiral Farragut.

The following letter from Admiral FARRAGUT was written in response to an invitation to attend the Pittsburg Chonvention:

NEW-YORK, Sept. 24, 1866,
No. 113 East Thirty-sixth-street.

SIR: Your invitation to be present at a National Convention of Soldiers and Sailors, to be held at Pittsburgh on the 25th inst., has just been received. Even if disposed to accept, the time is too limited; but on principle I am, an officer of the navy, unwilling to take any part in political assemblies, and, therefore, with thanks to yourself for the pleasant tone of your letter, I beg to decline the invitation.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. G. FARRAGUT, Admiral.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA SEA ISLANDS.

The Bureau Working Smoothly—An Efficient and Popular Assistant Commissioner—A Factious Move Checkmated—The Picking and Division of the Sea Island Crop—Advantages of the System of Weekly Wages—The Mania for Cotton-stealing—Anxiety of the Freedmen to be Educated—Their Rapid Improvement—Queer Scenes, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

EDISTO ISLAND, S. C., Saturday, Sept. 22.

Whatever abuses or mismanagement may have marked the administration of the Freedmen's Bureau in other sections of the South, it is very certain that, in this Sea Island region, the discontinuance of its influence is not now desired either by the whites or by the blacks. Indeed every intelligent planter here with whom I have conversed on the subject, freely admits that without the harmonizing agency of the Bureau, the work of organizing and controlling the labor of the freed people, difficult enough as it is, would, in the face of the thousand and one queer ideas and prejudices with which the negroes have become imbued, be an almost hopeless task. The good judgment, strict integrity, and general efficiency uniformly displayed by the present Bureau Commissioner for this State, Gen. R. K. SCOTT, have afforded so striking a contrast with the reign of confusion, extravagance and shameless peculation which prevailed during the administration of his predecessor, that the Bureau, formerly the synonym of injustice and plunder with the people hereabouts, is now regarded by them as an institution, if not faultless, at least conducted in a spirit of fairness and, in the present anomalous condition of social affairs, extremely useful to all classes. As an instance of the

POPULARITY OF GEN. SCOTT,

I may relate an incident which occurred a few weeks ago, of which I have seen no mention in the Northern papers. It seems that the regulations enforced by Gen. SCOTT, to protect the freedmen from the imposition of sharpers, had in some manner interfered with the speculative operations of two individuals who are "running" plantations near Beaufort, and who are said to be sons of the disinterested Parson FRENCH, whose vagaries in dealing with the emancipated, as exposed some months ago by one of the special correspondents of the TIMES, were rather more creditable to his financial shrewdness than to his clerical sanctity. These two persons, finding a sudden check put to their questionable proceedings, and to the fat profits arising therefrom, determined if possible to remove the obstacle that stood in their way. With this view they trumped up a series of specious complaints against the Assistant Commissioner, and forwarded them to the War Department at Washington. What weight, if any, these complaints may have had at the headquarters of the Army, or of the Bureau, is not known here; but it is certain that their reception in Washington was followed almost immediately, by the issuance of an order, to take effect on the 1st of September, relieving Gen. SCOTT from further duty as Assistant Commissioner of the Bureau in South Carolina, and providing for his being honorably mustered out of the service. On hearing of this order, a number of the most prominent of the planters of the seaboard, on behalf of the entire community, united in a strong remonstrance, which was forwarded by telegraph to the President, against a measure so hasty and ill-advised. They represented the beneficial effects which had already resulted from the wise, firm and moderate administration of the Bureau affairs in this Department by Gen. SCOTT, and urged the impolicy of removing him from a position of great and delicate responsibility, in which his usefulness and efficiency had been so apparent. Their remonstrance was not unavailing; for an order was presently issued suspending until the 1st of December next the operation of the order relieving him from duty. This will give to all parties concerned the advantage of his just and impartial superintendence in the important operations of

THE PICKING, WEIGHING, GINNING AND DIVISION OF THE COTTON CROP.

The first three of these processes are now progressing briskly on nearly all the plantations, and the subordinate officers of the Bureau are busy perfecting their plans for such an adjustment of the difficult matter of a division of the staple as will be equitable and satisfactory to planter and to laborer alike. Further investigation and developments in regard to the amount of the yield tend to confirm the opinion expressed in my last letter, that the average Sea Island crop of this year will not exceed, even if it should equal, one-fifth of an ordinary crop in the years before the war. As the operations of the year, on almost every plantation, have been conducted upon the plan of sharing the crop, nearly, if not quite one-half of the entire yield will go into the hands of the freedmen, leaving to the planter profits which, even at the present high price for cotton, will be decidedly slender. Comparatively few of the planters, however, will consent to plant next year upon any other system than the payment of weekly wages to their hands. This plan of cash-dealing with the negroes, where the planter can command the requisite funds, is believed to be the most economical in the long run; but, apart from that consideration, it possesses incalculable advantages in defining in a way that even the most opaque freedman can at once understand, the relations between employer and employe; it imposes a check upon the absurd presumption and unbearable insolence on the part of some of the blacks, growing out of their consciousness of owning an interest in the crop; it gives the planter the simplest and most efficacious of all remedies for neglect on the part of his laborer, and better than all, it at once places a standing premium upon the labor of willing, industrious and steady hands. The most serious obstacle in the way of rendering available the full proceeds of this year's planting to the proprietor and freedmen to whom they legitimately belong, is which prevails to an almost incredible extent throughout this whole region. I refer to the pilfering of cotton in small quantities—say from 20 to 60 pounds—by negroes who have no connection with the plantation from which it is taken. This system of petty plunder receives its main encouragement from the conduct of a few dishonest whites scattered through the country, who, under cover of keeping small shops, will readily buy the cotton—whether clean or unginned—which the thieves bring them in small sacks, and without asking the sellers any awkward or inconvenient questions. It is no exaggerated estimate to say that quite ten per cent. of the Sea Island crop of this year will be thus spirited away from its rightful owners. The Bureau officers, however, are doing what they can to put a stop to this bad practice, and to the illicit traffic to which it gives rise; and the planters and the freedmen in their employ, urged by a common interest, have lately redoubled the vigilance with which they watch their fleecy treasure, both before and after it has left the stalk.

EAGERNESS OF THE NEGROES TO BE EDUCATED.

In riding over this island, and passing the various groups of negro houses on the different plantations, I could not help being struck at the evidences which met my eye on every side of the eager desire of the freed people to obtain the education which they now consider the main barrier against their complete equality with the whites. If their capacity to learn could keep pace with their anxiety for mental improvement, the education of the entire black population hereabouts would be a task easily and quickly accomplished. Every ebony urchin that you meet is armed with a spelling-book, which receives the most zealous and persevering attention, though the dog-eared instrument of learning is as often held upside-down as otherwise, and the adults emulate the diligence of their offspring in this respect. Glancing in the interior of the quarters as you pass, you will find huge pictorial alphabets affixed to the wall of almost every house, and in some cases, ostentatiously displayed on the outside of the house, close to the doorway. It may be that the letters fail to convey any distinct impression to the minds of these poor people; but they certainly study over the woodcuts with a delight that betokens a large appreciation of their own increasing intelligence in being able to comprehend them. In spite of all the disadvantages under which they are striving for education, the improvement of the Edisto freedmen is a matter of general surprise and remark among the whites; and the new comer from the North and the planter of the old régime now unite in the anticipation that the lapse of a generation among the emancipated blacks, however it may affect their numbers and vigor as a race, will assuredly work wonders in the matter of their civilization and mental development.

THE STEAMER PLANTER.—Everybody who was in Charleston during the war remembers the famous escapade of the steamer Planter from under the guns of Fort Sumter. The United States Government having no further use for the steamer, has disposed of her at auction in Baltimore. Our readers will be glad to learn that the former owner of the Planter, Capt. JOHN FERGUSON, has become her purchaser, and that under his auspices this staunch craft, which has received the most elaborate and expensive improvements and repairs while in the service of the Government, will be hereafter regularly engaged in the Santee trade, for which she was originally built.—Charleston Courier, Sept. 26.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE ALLEGED HOMICIDE.

Examination Before Coroner Naumann and a Jury—Acquittal of the Prisoners and Exculpation of Dr. Shine.

Yesterday Coroner NAUMANN held an inquest at the Twenty-seventh Precinct Station, touching the death of MARY PINCKNEY, an inmate of a brothel in the basement of No. 126 Greenwich-street, who, it is alleged, died under the circumstances detailed in yesterday's TIMES. The proprietor of the house, MICHAEL HOEY, and his barkeeper, JOHN CLAUSSEN, had been detained to await the examination, and also eight girls, inmates of the place. The post-mortem examination had satisfied the Coroner that there was no evidence on the body of deceased that she had been kicked or otherwise abused; nevertheless, seeing that the matter had already obtained considerable publicity, he concluded to proceed with the examination.

Elizabeth Smyth, one of the girls held over night, was called and sworn. She stated that she lived at No. 126 Greenwich-street: knew the deceased for four or five years; had lived in the same house with her for the past four months; deceased had a cough, and complained occasionally but had general good health until the last three days, during which she was confined to bed, and threw up blood at times; Drs. Good and Shine were sent for; she got worse until her death, at two o'clock on Sunday; saw no person at any time use violence to her; she was treated by the proprietor as any other servant girl, not abused in any way.

A juror stated that he saw witness on Sunday with a basin of blood in her hands, which she was about to throw out. Witness stated that she attended the sick woman, who vomited blood frequently.

H. W. Good, M. D., examined: Stated that he resides at No. 132 Greenwich-street; that he was called in to No. 126 on Friday last, and found the patient suffering from profuse hemorrhage; he prescribed for her, and again visited her in the evening when she seemed to be improved; called again on Saturday, between eleven and twelve, when he found her worse; he then ordered a more frequent repetition of the treatment; called again at two o'clock, accompanied by another physician, when she was again improved, and he again called on Saturday evening, between eight and nine o'clock, when he found her so ill that he concluded she could not survive during the night; the deceased had not complained of abusive treatment, but confessed that she had led a very debauched life, and that her lungs were diseased; he had no reason whatever to presume that the deceased was suffering from other than natural causes.

Augustus Wohlforth, M. D., residing at No. 23 Frankfort-street, who made the post-mortem examination of the body of deceased, stated that he could detect no marks of violence. He found deceased's right lung diseased, the stomach slightly congested, and the fluid contained therein having the appearance of decomposed blood; the intestines were gorged with coagulated blood. His opinion was that the hemorrhage was caused by disease of the stomach or intestines previously formed.

William Shine, M. D., being examined, stated that he resided at No. 126 Greenwich-street; was called first to see deceased on Saturday evening, at half-past nine o'clock; he refused to go, knowing that another physician (Dr. Good) was attending her; on Sunday morning, learning that she was still unattended, he then visited her and made an external examination, but found no evidence of abuse on her person; at that time she was discharging large quantities of blood; he pronounced her to be suffering from severe hemorrhage of the stomach; she was then in a dying state, and he so advised the other inmates of the house; he had treated her formerly; she had called upon him probably ten times prior to this last attack, and he had prescribed for her. His opinion was that she died from hemorrhage, as described in testimony of previous witnesses.

Dr. SHINE accounted for the fact that he gave a certificate by saying that, having frequently prescribed for the deceased as suffering from the disease named, and knowing that Dr. GOOD was also attending her, he did not think that he was in error in granting the certificate. He had been frequently instructed by the Board of Health to grant certificates a few hours after death during the prevalence of sickness lately.

There being no further evidence, and it being considered as conclusive that the deceased came to her death from natural causes, a verdict to that effect was rendered and the Jury discharged.

Coroner NAUMANN exculpated Dr. SHINE from undue precipitancy in granting the certificate, under the circumstances, but suggested that now that no epidemic prevailed among us, it would be better in all cases to allow at least twenty-four hours to expire after death before granting the certificate, thus complying with the letter of the law.

The prisoners were thereupon discharged.

The Contract System—A Letter from Comptroller Brennan.

Yesterday a number of bids for paving and repairing the streets, constructing sewers, &c., were to have been opened by the Croton Aqueduct Department, in the presence of the Comptroller. That gentleman, however, declined to be present, for the reasons stated in the following letter:

CITY OF NEW-YORK, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE,
COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, Sept. 26, 1866.

To the Croton Aqueduct Board of the City of New-York.

GENTLEMEN: I consider it to be my duty not to be present at the opening of the bids for the large amount of work for stone pavement and sewers proposed to be awarded by you this day.

My conclusion in this respect is based on two grounds:

First—Because the list of jobs intended to be awarded to-day embraces work that cannot be legally done, such as building sewers where the street is not opened by law; and,

Second—Because the greatest part of the work proposed to be let cannot be performed at this season, in consequence of the deficiency of the requisite material, owing to the excessive amount of work of the same description already let by your Board; and because, in some cases, even if the material could be procured, the contracts would have to be suspended at the setting in of Winter weather. You propose to let to-day contracts for twenty-two different jobs, amounting in the aggregate of estimated cash to about $300,000, and involving work subject to the objections I have specified. As all the jobs are advertised to be let at the same hour to-day, and my presence would permit them all to be awarded, I cannot avail myself of the objection I consider it my duty to make without sustaining altogether from being present, I will be happy to confer with your Board, and agree on an early day, for the opening of bids for the work not subject to objection.

The charter invests the office of Comptroller with the "control of all the fiscal concerns" of the corporation, and makes his presence at the opening of bids for contract work for the corporation necessary to the validity of the contracts. It has been contended by the contracting departments that this requirement of the law is a merely formal provision, and does not invest the Comptroller with any power over the lettings, or involve him in any responsibility for any improvident, illegal or otherwise objectional contract. I cannot so regard it. The Legislature has imposed the duty on the Comptroller of being present and taking a part in certain acts essential to the creation of legal obligations on the part of the corporation, and I cannot understand why this duty does not involve the same responsibility as every other. If at the time a contract is to be let, I know or believe that there are objections, which in conscience and duty would make it improper that the contract should be let, I cannot perceive on what grounds I could justify my presence, to give validity to it, and that even though the heads of the Department proposing to let the contract should differ decidedly with me in reference to the force and weight of such objections. If the exercise of the duty in these instances, or any other which fall within my province, shall interfere with the discretion and independent action which a department may claim for itself, I can at most only regret the fact; I cannot change the law, or avoid its obligation. The law imposes the duty, and I must perform it, with all its responsibilities. I have thus alluded to the subject because I am aware that your Board dispute any right, on my part, to exercise any judgment in the premises, and that I have no alternative but to be present whenever you summon me.

If reasons were needed for the action of the Legislature in giving the Comptroller power to intervene against the making of illegal or improvident contracts, they may be founded on the fact that that officer, being charged with all the fiscal concerns of the Corporation, should be in a position to see to it that obligations are not created which cannot be met, or which will lead to the embarrassment of the City finances.

Among the jobs proposed to be let to-day are twelve for paving certain streets of the City with trap or block pavement. Your Board have already, during the present year, let forty-six jobs for work of this description, involving an aggregate of 300,071 yards, at a cost of over $800,000. This extent of work has, I am assured, exhausted the resources for the material required, and the only effect of allowing the contracts in question to be made now, will be to enhance the prices, and to provide for the appointment of supernumerary inspectors, whose salaries will have to be paid by the owners of property to be assessed for the improvement, or the Corporation, as the case may be. With the appointment of these inspectors, after the contracts are awarded, I have nothing to do. But it is a source of serious expense in ordinary cases, and as I am informed that your Board appoint three or four inspectors for the same job, it may be in these cases a heavy item in the cost, and should enter into the question of the propriety of letting the contracts at this time.

It may be said that the Corporation have no direct interest in the contracts for stone pavement because the ordinances authorizing the works provide that the entire expense is to be borne by the owners of property. I consider that I am just as much bound to protect the owners of property against unjust exactions, and heavy, unnecessary expenditures, as I am to stand between the Corporation and any such improper attempts at liability. But if this were otherwise, the practice has been in these cases, after authorizing the work, with the stipulation that the owners of property shall bear the entire expense, for the Common Council subsequently to amend the ordinance so as to charge the Corporation with one-half the expense; and this has been done in some instances even after the assessment lists have been made up. I must, looking to the practice in these cases, regard the Corporation as having a direct interest affecting the appropriations by the Legislature and the finances of the City in all these cases.

I would remark, too, that the system of letting these contracts under the supposed obligation of the owners of property to bear the whole expense, and subsequently charging the City with one-half thereof, is a grave abuse. If that charge were attempted when the contract is proposed to be let, the contract could not be legally made, because the appropriations limited by the tax-levy would not meet them. The law is consequently evaded in the mode I have stated, and the debt of the City thereby improperly extended.

I would also present as pertinent to this subject the numerous cases in which, after work has been performed of a purely local character, the assessments have been set aside by the courts, on technical grounds, and the entire expense saddled on the City at large. There is now a debt charged to assessment account of over $3,000,000 upon the City at large, the principal and interest of which must be paid by taxation.

The system of double dealing in regard to pavement work to which I have alluded, creates irregularities which invalidate the assessments; and thus, eventually, the entire expense of the work started as private enterprise is made to fall upon the City at large, to swell the taxes which fall so unevenly upon our citizens.

There are other objections to the letting of these contracts at the present time, which occur to me, and which I may suggest at another period, but these I hope will be deemed sufficient to justify me in declining to be present at the opening of the bids in question. Very respectfully,

MATTHEW T. BRENNAN, Comptroller.

POLICE COURTS.

The Tombs—Before Justice Hogan.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.

CHARLES ANDERSON, a seafaring man, went into the dance house, No. 88 James-street, on Sunday evening, and there met JOHN DIXON and WILLIAM RUGGE, with whom he became very friendly. While engaged in conversation with his new-made acquaintances, RUGGE, as is alleged by ANDERSON, struck the sailor a powerful blow in the mouth with his fist, the force of which nearly upset him. While thus dazed and helpless, ANDERSON was robbed of his watch, valued at $45, and a breast pin, which he states were taken from his person by DIXON. After ANDERSON had been released and the thieves had made good their escape, Officer BYRNES, of the Fourth Ward Police, was apprised of the facts in the case, and he succeeded soon after in arresting both DIXON and RUGGE. EMMA JOHNSON, an inmate of the house where the robbery was committed, was also secured, and the missing time-keeper was found in her possession. EMMA confessed after her arrest that she had found the watch in her bed, and stated that the prisoner DIXON had placed it there. Both the men were brought before the Magistrate yesterday morning, when they were held for trial at the Court of General Sessions, in default of $2,000 bail each. Both ANDERSON, the complainant, and the girl EMMA JOHNSON, were sent to the House of Detention for witnesses, to await the approaching trial.

LARCENY OF RIBBONS.

On the afternoon of Friday last, a sneak thief entered the store No. 324 Canal-street, kept by IRA BEARD, and carried off a box containing 27 rolls of silk ribbons, valued at $110, and made good his escape. The Police were informed of the robbery, and they made all due search for the thief and his plunder. Yesterday Officer MCGILL, of the Fourth Precinct, succeeded in tracing the stolen ribbons, with the exception of three pieces, to the possession of LEWIS CORNE, of No. 45 Madison-street, who, on being questioned, stated that he had purchased them from JOHN HOWE, a second-hand dealer, doing business at No. 23 New Bowery, and the truth of his statement was subsequently verified. HOWE was next interrogated in relation to the stolen property alleged to have passed through his hands, and stated that he had purchased it from a peddlar, whose name and place of business he had unfortunately for gotten. This did not satisfy the officer, so HOWE was arrested on a charge of complicity in the larceny. When arraigned before the Court, Mr. BEARD made the complaint, and HOWE was held for trial and locked up in default of bail.

A COLORED THIEF.

Officer ARMSTRONG, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, arrested a negro porter named WILLIAM MARSHAL, yesterday afternoon, who was accused of stealing, on the 10th ult., a silk dress pattern, a silk shawl, several silk scarfs, linen handkerchiefs, &c., valued, in the aggregate, at $60. The property was taken from the premises of WILLIAM R. GARRISON, at No. 42 West Twenty-eighth-street. When taken into custody the prisoner freely admitted his guilt, and gave such information as led to the ultimate recovery of a greater portion of the property. MARSHAL was held for trial. He is a native of Maryland, thirty-four years of age, and resides on Staten Island.

THEFT OF A RING.

PHILIP GOLDMAN resides at No. 111½ Division-street, and received a visit from JACOB STURRAGAST on the 7th ult. He treated his guest hospitably, and bade him welcome. After the evening had been whiled away quite pleasantly JACOB rose to go, and shook hands with his host at parting. When GOLDMAN extended his hand he wore a handsome gold ring on one finger, but he discovered after STURRAGAST had gone, that the ring had disappeared also. Nothing more was heard of the missing ring until Sunday last, when a brother of the owner, SAMUEL GOLDMAN, of No. 144 Delancy-street, saw JACOB and was surprised to see the ring on his finger. This discovery led to the arrest of STURRAGAST, by Officer DRUCKER, of the Sixth Precinct, and on the accused being brought into court he was held for trial in default of $300 bail.

INDECENT ASSAULT UPON A LITTLE GIRL.

Officer PRICE, of the Fourth Precinct, arrested GEORGE ANDREWS, yesterday afternoon, on a charge of indecent assault. It appears that the prisoner is a laborer, 32 years of age, and is accused of committing a brutal outrage upon the person of ELIZABETH SULLIVAN, 8 years of age, who resides with her parents in the tenement-house No. 27 Roosevelt-street. Police-Surgeon WATERMAN was called to examine the child, and discovered indications that such an attempt had been made. The prisoner was remanded for further examination.

Jefferson Market—Before Justice Smith.

A HOTEL THIEF NICELY CAUGHT.

Mr. CHARLES B. HALL, of Memphis, Tenn., is at present a guest at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Yesterday morning he went down to breakfast about 9 o'clock, leaving his room door securely locked. On his return about an hour afterward he found the door open, and upon entering, discovered a young man overhauling his trunk, the lid of which he had forced open, evidently with some burglarious instrument. On a chair near by were two coats, a vest and a pair of pantaloons belonging to Mr. HALL, which the thief had taken from a wardrobe in the room. The owner of the goods immediately seized the burglar and raised an alarm which quickly brought Detective ROGERS, who is regularly attached to the hotel, to his assistance, when the fellow was conveyed before Justice SMITH, where he gave the name of SAMUEL TILDEN. He was committed for trial without bail. The prisoner is alleged to be a well-known thief, and goes under the aliases of George Anderson, O. W. Ellsworth, and Alfred Morgan.

ALLEGED THEFT BY A DOMESTIC.

Mrs. LIZZIE ST. JOHN ESKEL, who resides at No. 8 University-place, yesterday preferred a charge upon ELLEN NILE who has been in her employ for a short time as house servant. According to the affidavit in the case, the girl stole $13 in United States bills, and a breast-pin worth $5 from her mistress' room on Sunday evening. The accused denies her guilt, but Mrs. ESKEL says she must have taken the property, as she was the only one having access to the apartment in which it was contained. An officer was detailed to go to Brooklyn to a house that is frequented by the girl, and see if any of the stolen property could be found there, but at the time of the adjournment of the Court he had not yet returned. Meanwhile the girl was temporarily committed.

STEALING A COAT.

LINA COHEN, who keeps a second-hand clothing-store at No. 103 Prince-street, yesterday caused the arrest of BENJAMIN SMITH, (a colored boy,) who, she alleges, came into the place yesterday to price some goods, and after he went out she missed a coat valued at $5. She immediately pursued him and handed him over to an officer who brought him to Court. He was committed for examination in default of $500 bail.

Essex Market—Before Justice Shandley.

A KEEPER OF THE HOUSE OF REFUGE IN BAD COMPANY.

SAMUEL J. REDPATH, one of the keepers of the House of Refuge on Randall's Island, happening to be in the City on Sunday evening, and not wishing to be bored with a dry sermon, did not go to Church, but chose to take a walk through the Bowery. Attracted by the sounds of sweet music, he entered the lager-beer saloon, No. 53 of the aforesaid street, and sitting down at one of the tables, called for something to drink. The liquor and music together seem to have had a very soothing influence upon him, for he was soon fast asleep, with one of the waiter girls, named CELIA SOMMERS, leaning lovingly upon his shoulder. When he awoke, about two hours afterward, he found that his watch, valued at $80, a meerschaum pipe worth $9, and about $3 in United States currency, had been taken from his pocket. He immediately went out in search of an officer, and returning with Detectives KING and LYON, of the Tenth Precinct, he caused the arrest of all the parties in the saloon. On the way to the Station-house the fair CELIA acknowledged that she was the thief, and gave the stolen property into the possession of the officers. She was thereupon committed for trial without bail. The officers then charged the proprietor, JOHN HENNEBY, with keeping a disorderly house, and he was compelled to find bail in the sum of $500 to answer the charge.

ROBBING A NEIGHBOR.

On Thursday evening last Mrs. SOPHIA FOSTER, who lives in the tenement-house No. 525 Grand-street, went out upon an errand; but before going she carefully locked her room door and took the key of the same with her. On her return, a short time afterward, she found her door open and discovered the loss of two feather beds valued at $50, two pairs of bolsters at $30, five feather pillows at $15, and four dresses at $15. For some time afterward she was at a loss to know who could have taken these articles, and was not relieved from suspense until yesterday, when she procured a search-warrant from Justice SHANDLEY, and with Officer ARMSTRONG of the Thirteenth Precinct, she proceeded to the apartments of ELIZA PHILLIPS, who lives in the same house, and there succeeded in recovering property which she alleges is the same as that stolen from her rooms. She thereupon caused the arrest of ELIZA, who was committed for examination in default of bail.

A DISHONEST VISITOR.

Mrs. MARY MANINGER, who resides at No. 51 Avenue A, appeared in Court yesterday and preferred a charge of larceny against one LYDIA WISELY, who, as she alleges, has been an acquaintance of hers for about two years—that she has been in the habit of visiting complainant's house regularly, almost every week. On Thursday last she was there, and after she had gone Mrs. M. missed a breastpin, a pair of gaiters and some articles of ladies' wear, valued in all at about $20. Shortly afterward she met the accused, who, when charged with the theft, at once acknowledged her guilt, and expressed her penitence for the commission of such a crime against her friend. She was committed for examination in default of bail.

Yorkville Court.—Before Justice Kelly.

APPROPRIATING A POCKET-BOOK.

Officer GOLDEN, of the Twelfth Precinct, arrested one MICHAEL HINES for stealing a pocket-book. It appears by the evidence of a Mr. EDWARD DUNN, who was a witness of the affair, that a wagon containing a lady and gentleman, was upset on Saturday in the Sixth-avenue, near One Hundred and Twenty-fourth-street, and the occupants were thrown to the pavement. In the fall one of them dropped his pocket-book, containing $20, from his pocket, which the prisoner was seen to pick up and put in his own pocket. He was admitted to $500 bail to answer the charge.

ASSAULT WITH A KNIFE.

Mr. THOMAS JOURDAN, residing at No. 224 West Fifty-third-street, preferred a charge against HENRY WAGNER, who, he alleges, violently assaulted him on Sunday night, and struck him a severe blow in the face with a knife, which inflicted a very dangerous wound. The accused was committed to answer in default of $1,000 bail.

LAW REPORTS.

Individual Liability of Stockholders—Power of Agents to Give Notes for a Company—How far Judgment Against a Company is Evidence of Indebtedness.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—OCT. 1.

Before Judge Cardozo.

Stewart et al. vs. Davis.—This was an action brought by A. T. Stewart & Co. against Thomas E. Davis, as stockholder in the "Anthony Falls Water Power Company," Minnesota, on a judgment obtained against the Company in the United States District Court of Minnesota. It appears that on the 14th of November, 1857, Richard Clute, as general agent of the above Company, gave a note to the plaintiffs for $2,213, payable on the 1st of July following. The note not being paid at maturity, was protested, and subsequently, in May, 1860, a judgment for the amount and interest was obtained by default in the United States District Court of Minnesota. The laws of Minnesota, at the time of the incorporation of the aforesaid Company, provided that each individual stockholder should be personally liable for the Company's debts, and the present suit is brought against Davis as one of the stockholders. By consent of parties, a jury trial was waived, and the case was heard before Judge CARDOZO yesterday. The defence moved to dismiss the complaint on the following grounds: 1. That a judgment obtained against a Corporation has not even the prima facie evidence of the indebtedness of one or more of the stockholders. 2. That even if it were prima facie evidence, which the Court intimated he believed it to be, it does not exclude the Court from an examination of the merits of the claim. 3. That the general power of attorney given to Clute, as agent of the Company, did not authorize him to give the Company's notes for any purpose without special authority, and especially to give notes for any other than the legitimate business of the Company, which was to improve the water-power in that neighborhood. This note was given for goods to furnish the Winslow Hotel—an establishment entirely outside the business for which the Company was organized. In support of these propositions, quotations were made from cases reported in 5th Denio, pages 567 and 573. Defendants' counsel also insisted that proof must be adduced of the execution of the note.

In reply to the grounds of defence, plaintiffs' counsel argued that the certified copy of the judgment obtained in Minnesota was not only prima facie but all-sufficient proof of the indebtedness of the Company and of the defendant, whom the laws of Minnesota made liable as one of the stockholders. It showed upon its face that the summons for commencing the suit was served upon Clute, the drawer of the note, upon the general clerk of the Company, who had charge of all its business, and upon one of the directors. If there was any defence to the claim such as now set up here—that the agent had no authority to draw the note, and that it was not given in the legitimate transactions of the Company—why was not that defence put in when the suit was first brought against the Company? The Company admitted that they owed the debt by not defending the suit, and in point of fact the hotel was owned by the Company, and the goods sold by plaintiffs for furnishing the same were received by the Company and used for its benefit. The District Court of Minnesota had decided that the debt was justly owing to the plaintiffs, and it was not for this Court to say that it was not. It made no difference, therefore, whether Clute had the authority to draw this note or not; that fact was admitted by the Company in not contesting the suit, and the plaintiffs now relied on the judgment the validity of which was the main question for the Court to decide.

Judge CARDOZO took the papers, and reserved his decision.

For plaintiffs, Prentiss & Flanders; for defendants, Platt, Gerard & Buckley.

Attachment of Vessels under the State Act of 1862—Discharge of Lien Jurisdiction.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—SEPT. 29.

Before Justice Sutherland.

In the Matter of the Schooner Vicksburgh.—A motion was made to discharge from an attachment issued under the New-York State Laws of 1862, the schooner Vicksburgh seized for stevedores' wages. The application for the warrant was made to, and a warrant issued by, Mr. Justice Ingraham, and the motion to discharge made before Mr. Justice SUTHERLAND at Chambers.

Upon the argument the jurisdiction of the latter was questioned, as the statute requires the motion to be made to the officer who grants the warrant. Judge SUTHERLAND considered the question doubtful, but after deliberation held that in the absence from Chambers of the officer granting the warrant, any Justice of this Court holding Chambers could hear the motion, and that he would certify the absence of Judge Ingraham from Chambers on the discharge. Motion granted and schooner discharged. Since the United States District Court has held that it cannot now take cognizance in admiralty of claims against domestic ships by material men, as in the recent case of Hubbard vs. steamboat James Guy, before Judge Benedict, the State law of 1862 will be more frequently resorted to for a remedy by material men. Mr. Cronin for motion; Mr. Lanktree opposed.

United States District Attorney's Office.

Mr. Samuel G. Courtney, District Attorney.

The United States District Attorney, on the third Monday of the present month, will enter a nolle prosequi in the case of the United States against William R. Roberts, President of one of the wings of the Fenian movement, in the United States Circuit Court. An order will also be entered cancelling the bail bond given by Mr. Roberts. In this matter Mr. Courtney is acting under an order from the United States Attorney-General. This is the end of the prosecutions which were commenced against the Fenians by the United States authorities in this district.

United States Commissioner's Office.

Before Commissioner Betts.

John Fink was arrested and taken before the Commissioner on the charge of passing a counterfeit fifty-cent currency note at No. 125 Sixth-street, and subsequently attempting to pass another counterfeit stamp of the same kind in a lager-beer saloon at No. 147 Sixth-street. The witnesses for the prosecution were Christina Schmidt, Adam Shaffler, Timothy Laughlin, John Kessel and Joseph Gleason. The further examination of the case was adjourned to Friday at 11 o'clock.

COURT CALENDAR—THIS DAY.

Court of Oyer and Terminer.

Before Justice Sutherland.

The grand jurors summoned for the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday were called, but there being no business before them, they were discharged, and the Court adjourned.

Court of General Sessions.

Before Recorder Hackett.

The October term of the Court of General Sessions commenced yesterday. Owing to there not being a sufficient number of gentlemen present in response to the summons for grand jurors, the Grand Jury was not impaneled. A new panel was ordered, both for the grand and petit jurors. Mr. Robert C. Hutchins, Assistant District Attorney, appeared for the people.

Stephen Geoghegan, who was convicted of assault and battery last week, was fined in the sum of $50.

A BURGLAR CAUGHT.

John Williams pleaded guilty of an attempt at burglary in the third degree. On the night of the 26th of August the prisoner broke into the premises No. 371 Pearl-street, by forcing the scuttle on the roof, and stole from various portions of the building articles of the value of $26. He was subsequently arrested by Officer Bapp, of the Seventh precinct, with the stolen property in his possession. Williams said he was a printer, and had no home. He was sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

STREET PICKPOCKETS.

John Wilson, Catharine Healy, Margaret Campbell and Kate Wallace, who were indicted for petit larceny from the person, were arraigned, when Wilson pleaded guilty of an attempt to commit petit larceny from the person. On the 8th of September Mrs. Sarah Tullough, of No. 206 Court-street, Brooklyn, while entering Washington Market from Vesey-street, had her pocket picked of a pocket-book, containing $2 in money, a three-cent postage-stamp, a bill of the New-York Evangelist and a key. She soon missed her book, but could not tell how it had been taken until at a later hour in the day, Officer James W. W. Scott, of the Twentieth Precinct, called at her house and asked her if she had been robbed. She said she had been robbed in Vesey-street, and described her pocket-book and the contents thereof, whereupon he informed her that he had arrested the prisoners named, and that one of them, Wilson, had thrown said pocket-book away, but that it had been secured. The property was subsequently duly identified, and yesterday the male prisoner pleaded guilty of an attempt, and was sentenced to the State Prison for two years and six months. The other prisoners were discharged by the Court.

A MAXIMILIAN CASE.

Francis Pellissier and Joseph Wall pleaded guilty of an attempt at burglary in the third degree. On the night of the 23d of August the prisoners forced open the door which leads into the hall of the second story of the building No. 214 William street, and stole from the room of Maximilian Demutha two coats, a watch and chain, and one pair of pants, all of the value of $200. The property was subsequently found in their possession. They were remanded for sentence.

The present Bank statement shows a partial decline in Loans and Legal-Tender Notes of about two and a half millions each. The Deposit line is only a million off, and the other items exhibit but slight changes from last Monday. The Money market for the present week opens steady, at the cheap rates and easy supply heretofore reported. The Banks are not able to lend up to their present ability without accepting the lowest rates, on call, which many of them are unwilling to do, while they are able to [illegible] in the Gold-bearing Funds of the United States at 108@109 ₱ cent.

The proportion of Legal-Tender and Gold and Gold Notes held by the Banks in the Clearing-house to their liabilities, is as follows:

On Deposit line of		$223,336,785
And Circulation of		29,213,950
Together		$252,550,735
Legal-Tender Notes	$87,826,021
Gold and Gold Notes	7,643,960	—$95,469,981
Proportion required by law		63,137,684
Excess of Legal-Tender on hand		$32,332,297

Present pro rata 38 ₱ cent.; legal pro rata 25 ₱ cent.

The price of Gold was ¼@½ per cent. firmer than on Saturday on the reported decline of United States 5-20s in London, and a rise of ¼ ₱ cent. in Exchange in this market. The sales of the latter were at 108¼@108½ for standard bills; sales of Gold at 146½ ₱ cent. Another California shipment arrived this morning amounting to $1,137,149. The Atlantic Cable advised on Saturday night further shipments to New-York from France and England, to the amount of $1,050,000. The Customs demand for Gold to-day was about $400,000. The Funds of the United States were lower at the close of the day on 5-20s of 1862 on the London telegrams. Other descriptions were also a small fraction cheaper than in the forenoon.

The speculation on the Railway list at the Stock Exchange is the most animated and strongly upward that we have known for a year past. The volume of business is even greater than at any time in 1865, when we take into account the unregistered transactions in the Long Room of the new Stock Exchange Building, where the Brokers of both Boards and the outside operators come together in common, except while the Boards are in session. The New-York Stocks take the lead to-day; Erie sold up to 86¼ ₱ cent., and New-York Central this afternoon was rapidly advanced to 117½ ₱ cent. The Western Roads were also very animated, and Philadelphia and Reading firm at 117½@118¼ ₱ cent. The Miscellaneous list participates in the general animation of the Share dealings, though not so strong in price, on all descriptions, as at the close of last week; the Rutland Marble, Canton Land Company and Quicksilver were firmest, and all three higher than Saturday; there was a partial weakness in Cumberland Coal, and some dullness in Mariposa at the reduced prices made on Friday and Saturday, until the Afternoon, when very heavy fresh purchases were made at 30@31@32.

In the afternoon, between the adjournment of the Boards of the Stock Exchange and 6 o'clock P. M., the wildest excitement prevailed in the Long Room and on the sidewalk in Broad-street, and the Railways and other Shares were bid up and bought and sold in large parcels at an advance of 1@2 and in some instances 3 ₱ cent. over the regular Board sales at 2:30 o'clock P. M. Erie was advanced to 88@88¼; New-York Central to 116¼; Fort Wayne to 107½ ex dividend; Michigan Southern, 90; N. West Common, 40¼; Preferred, 74; Mariposa Preferred, 32; Pittsburgh, 91½. The price of Gold also advanced to 147 ₱ cent., and Exchange on London to 108¾. At the very close the following quotations were made as compared with Saturday afternoon. The Border State Bonds were higher on Tennessees; the Ohio and Mississippi Certificates, very largely dealt in, advancing to 32 ₱ cent.

Mr. EDWARD C. BRODHEAD, of the Stock Exchange, has formed a partnership with J. F. COLE, formerly in the dry goods trade in Cincinnati, and JOHN A. WILSON, formerly of Pittsburgh, Penn., under the firm name of BRODHEAD, COLE & Co. Messrs. BRODHEAD, COLE & Co. will occupy the new premises No. 24 Broad-street.

Mr. WM. CLARK, exchange broker, corner of Chambers and Chatham streets, has shown us a counterfeit $100 note, of the National Bank currency. The counterfeit has just made its appearance. The one brought to our notice was on the Central National Bank of this City, and was well calculated to deceive. The engravings on the face and back of the note were unusually well executed. The signatures of the President and Cashier, however, were poor imitations of the genuine. The legend on the extreme left of the figure of Liberty was incorrectly engraved, so as to read "Maintain it." The printing of the note was the least successful feature of it.

GENERAL MARKETS.

WOOL—The movements in this line, during the past month, Messrs. TELLKAMPF & KITCHING notice thus: "During the month of September, the Wool market was comparatively quiet. Combing wools have been sought after and command good prices. Pulled wools are slow of sale, with the exception of the low long staple descriptions. The stocks of domestic fleece and pulled remain about the same as at the opening of the month, but the prices are somewhat easier. Texas Wools have been in good demand at slightly improved rates, but during the last week of September the demand had fallen off. California Wools have not been in much request. In fact but little has been done, and sales could only be effected at a loss. Foreign fine Wools, such as Cape and Mestizo, have been disposed of to a limited extent, at 24c.@25c., gold, for ordinary, and 26c.@28c., gold, for good grades in small lots. The medium class of foreign Wools is not wanted, and prices are greatly depressed. Low Wools for carpets and worsted yarns continue scarce, and find a ready market at better prices. The accounts from the European and English markets indicate a better feeling, with a tendency to higher prices. The imports of Wool into New-York for the year 1864 were 115,800 bales—52,729,083 lbs. The imports of Wool into New-York for the year 1865, were 59,391 bales—23,554,849 lbs. The imports of Wool into New-York from January 1 to Aug. 28, 1866, were 50,937 bales—22,148,682 lbs. The imports of Wool into New-York for the month ending Sept. 22, were 2,778 bales—1,317,342 lbs.

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

OF THE

CENTRAL Pacific R. R. Co.

OF CALIFORNIA.

Interest at the rate of Six per Cent. per annum, payable Semi-Annually, on the First days of January and July.

Principal & Interest payable in U. S. Gold Coin in the City of New York.

Amount of Issue, $7,336,000.

In Coupon Bonds of $1,000 each.

The Bonds have Thirty Years to run, and are secured by a First Mortgage, constituting an absolute prior lien on that portion of the Road, Equipments, Franchises, and Entire Property of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, located in the State of California, and extending from Sacramento City to the California State Line, forming a part of the GREAT PACIFIC RAILROAD ROUTE, adopted and aided by the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

The amount of these First Mortgage Bonds to be issued per mile is limited by law to the amount of United States Bonds allowed and issued to aid the construction of the Road, and the Mortgage by which they are secured is declared by Act of Congress to constitute a lien prior and superior to that of the United States Government, and all others whatsoever.

The aid received from the Government (in amount equal to this First Mortgage) is economically and judiciously applied to the construction and equipment of the Road, together with nearly $7,000,000, received from Stock Subscriptions and other sources. The First Mortgage therefore amounts to but about 35 per cent. of the actual cost and value of the Property which it covers.

The road is now completed, equipped and running from Sacramento City to Alta, a distance of 73 miles, and the earnings for the three months ending August 1st were as follows, viz.:

May, 1866	$65,115.83
June "	67,429.78
July "	85,000.00

IN GOLD.

The earnings are steadily increasing, and are estimated at over $100,000 in Gold for the month of August—the official report for that month not having been received at this date.

The construction of the road is going vigorously forward,—24 miles additional being nearly ready for the cars,—and it will probably be in full operation to the California State Line—156 miles from Sacramento City—during the summer of 1867, when its earnings must be very large, as the entire trade of Nevada, and a large proportion of that of Utah, Idaho and Montana must pass over its line. It has been shown by reliable statistics that in 1863 over $13,000,000 in Gold was paid for freighting goods from California to Nevada alone.

This part of the Great Pacific Railroad Route is destined to be one of the most profitable lines of railroad in the world, and its First Mortgage Bonds are among the best secured and most desirable investments ever offered.

Over $1,000,000 has already been expended in grading beyond the point to which the road is now running, and the iron is bought and paid for sufficient to lay the track the entire distance to the State Line.

The Road has been completed and equipped thus far without the sale of a single dollar of its First Mortgage Bonds, and they are now offered to the public for the first time, after the earnings of the Road have reached the sum of $100,000 per month in Gold, only about 25 per cent. of which is required for operating expenses.

The Bonds are offered at 95 per cent. and accrued interest from July 1st, in Currency. Orders may be forwarded to us direct, or through the principal Banks and Bankers in all parts of the country.

Remittances may be made in drafts on New York, or in Legal Tender Notes, National Bank Notes, or other funds current in this city, and the Bonds will be forwarded to any address by Express, free of charge. Inquiries for further particulars, by mail or otherwise, will receive punctual attention.

FISK & HATCH, Bankers,
No. 5 Nassau St., New York.

N. B.—All kinds of Government Securities received at the full market price in exchange for the above Bonds.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH SELECT PROTESTANT SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES, No. 111 East 36th-st., first house below Park-av.

Mlle. ROSTAN, having entirely recovered her health, will reopen her school on TUESDAY, the 15th October next. Mlle. Rostan spent most of the past year in making herself thoroughly acquainted with the improvements lately introduced in the present systems of education in Europe; making large additions to her library, securing valuable apparatus, &c. She therefore returns, not only with renewed health, but, as she trusts, with increased abilities to secure the advancement of her pupils.

The course of instruction, thorough and comprehensive, is designed to combine a finished English education with the practical knowledge of the French and other modern languages. Special advantages will also be enjoyed in Music, Drawing and Painting, and classes, under the best teachers, will be formed at once on the plan adopted in Paris in the "Conservatoire" and the "Ecole des Beaux Arts."

A limited number of young ladies will be received in the family and welcomed to share in all the comforts and privileges of a pleasant home.

Applications can be made personally or by letter at the above address.

Circulars sent if desired.

M. W. LYON'S COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

Nos. 161 FIFTH-AV. and 937 BROADWAY, corner 22d-st., REOPENS SEPT. 17.

Its rooms have lofty ceilings, are all upon the same floor and heated by steam. For spaciousness, light, ventilation, ease of access, indeed for all school purposes, they are unsurpassed. All the older pupils are under the direct training of Mr. Lyon, the younger of Mrs. Lyon. Gymnastic instruction will be provided. For several years the roll of pupils has annually increased from 30 to 50 per cent., exceeding now 100. Very few have left, in some years none, for other schools. A fine class is preparing for college. Parents are invited to call. Several names of patrons for two or more years follow:

IN PURSUANCE OF A DECREE IN CHANCERY, of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Seventh Circuit and Southern District of Ohio, in a cause wherein E. D. Morgan et al. are complainants, and the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company et al. are defendants, and of a decree in Chancery, entered in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eighth Circuit and District of Indiana, in a cause wherein the said E. D. Morgan et al. are complainants, and the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company et al. are defendants, and by virtue of the authority conferred upon us by a certain deed of trust, called a second mortgage, dated December 1, 1853, executed and delivered by the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company to Edward D. Mansfield and John McLean, and by certain proceedings whereby the said John McLean having declined to act, Geo. Hoadly was in due legal form substituted in his stead, and became with the said Edward D. Mansfield the grantee of said second mortgage, the undersigned, trustees and attorneys, appointed by said deed of trust and by the said proceedings substituting said Hoadley for said McLean, will, at 11 o'clock A. M., on WEDNESDAY, the 9th day of January, 1867, offer for sale at public auction, at the door of the United States Court-house in Cincinnati, and sell to the highest bidder, complying with the terms of sale hereinafter stated, all and singular the following described premises and real and personal estate and franchises, to-wit: The railroad constructed by the said Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company in the States of Ohio and Indiana, in and connecting the cities of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Vincennes, in Indiana, including the lands occupied and intended to be occupied by the said Railroad and its appurtenances, the track, rails, buildings, bridges, viaducts, cattle-guards, fixtures, and the lands upon which the same are situated, and all the privileges, franchises and rights whatsoever of the said Company, and the tolls, income, issues and profits thereof, and all the depots and stations, and the real estate upon which they are situated, and all the locomotives, tenders, cars and machinery owned by or in any way belonging to the said Company, and all benefit and equity of redemption of said Company therein, together with all the rights, claims and demands of said Company against the Indianapolis and Cincinnati Railroad Company, upon or growing out of a contract between said Companies, dated Oct. 2, 1856, but subject to all the duties and liabilities imposed by said contract upon the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company; SUBJECT, HOWEVER, to the payment of the principal of the bonds secured by the first mortgage executed by the said Company, that is to say, to the payment on the first day of July, 1872, in the City of New-York, of two thousand and fifty bonds, each for the sum of one thousand dollars; and SUBJECT, ALSO, to the payment of the interest on said bonds as the same shall accrue and become due on and after the 1st day of January, 1867, said interest being at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, upon presentation of the coupons or interest warrants therefor; and SUBJECT, ALSO, to the lien of the said first mortgage on all of said property for the said principal and the interest which may accrue on and after the 1st day of January, 1867, the payment of which principal and interest the purchaser at said sale is to assume, and the lien of said mortgage securing the same is to remain in full force in law and equity, notwithstanding said sale; but FREE AND DISCHARGED from all other claims of the creditors and stockholders of said Company.

TERMS OF SALE CASH.

No bid will be received for less than $1,000,000. No bid will be received unless the bidder shall have previously deposited in the Commercial Bank of Cincinnati, as a special deposit, subject to our order, either the sum of $50,000 in lawful money of the United States, or $100,000 in the first or second mortgage bonds of the said Railroad Company, and shall have delivered to us the proper evidence thereof. Such deposit will be returned to any bidder whose bid is not the highest; but the deposit made by the purchaser will be forfeited and converted to the use of the creditors of the said Company, if such purchaser fail to pay the residue of the said purchase money, and complete his purchase.

All persons desiring to bid will find on file in the offices of the Clerks of the said Courts, respectively, a correct schedule of the property and premises to be offered for sale.

DENTISTRY.

SOMETHING NEW!

Drs. BLAKENEY & HUBBARD, Practical Dentists, of No. 103 West 22d-st., have, after years spent in a laborious series of experiments, developed a new method of generating and administering nitrous oxide, (laughing gas,) to which they would respectfully call attention of physicians and the public generally. Our process secures perfectly the annihilation of all pain in short or protracted operations of surgery without any risk of life or injurious effects to the system. The manner in which laughing-gas has been administered heretofore by means of a small ugly-shaped rubber bag, from which the patient has been obliged to breathe carbonic acid gas, the production of his own lungs, causing a racking sensation and unnatural action of the brain and deranging necessarily the nervous system, is by this improvement obviated, and instead of partial suffocation, although perhaps entirely without the knowledge of the semi-unconscious patient; the breathing is natural and easy, while the sensations produced by a few respirations of the gas are delightfully felicitous. By this process the operation of tooth-drawing is relieved of all pain, and, at the same time new life and vigor is imparted to the entire mental and physical economy. We cordially invite physicians, literary gentlemen, and the public generally to visit our rooms and examine our improvement for themselves. Gas administered daily at the usual price. Heads of public institutions and hospitals will be liberally treated with, who desire to avail themselves of this safe and wonderfully improved anesthetic. Give us a call.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

GENERAL NEWS.

G. Elmore Burgess, late a Captain in the Confederate Army, writes to the National Intelligencer that he has in his possession a belt reputed to have been the property of the late Gen. McPherson. In his note he says: "I would have made known this fact long ere this, but I was not positively certain whether it was really the property of Gen. McPherson, nor am I yet; but if it is genuine, I am confident it will be prized and cherished by those who are near and dear to him, as he was loved and admired not only by his own soldiers, but by every true soldier of the Southern army. It may not be amiss to state that I came in possession of the belt immediately after the battle in front of Atlanta, having bought it from a soldier of the Texas Brigade. Any relatives of the deceased entitled to it can obtain the belt by addressing me at Chunnennuggee, Macon County, Alabama."

The steamer Somerset, of the Baltimore and Liverpool Steamship Line, which was to have sailed on Saturday afternoon with a full cargo, on attempting to get her out into the stream grounded hard and fast, drawing about eighteen feet of water. Efforts were made to relieve her, which, however, were unsuccessful until about nine o'clock Sunday morning, when she was got off. She had steamed as far as the vicinity of Fort McHenry when it was discovered that she was leaking so badly as to necessitate her return to port—a hole having been knocked in her stern. She was brought to the wharf, and a large force of men put to work at removing her cargo, a portion of which, it is supposed, will be damaged by the water.

The memorial which Amherst College is to erect to her alumni and students who fell in the war is to be a group of bronze statuary, which will cost not less than $25,000. The Committee having the matter in charge have already received a subscription of $5,000 to carry out their design. The work, when complete, will be deposited in the present library building, which, when the new one is completed, is to be entirely devoted to an art gallery. Larkin G. Mead, Jr., of Brattleboro', has been in consultation with Prof. Clark on the matter, and some of the best sculptors in the country will be invited to contribute designs.

The United States Sanitary Commission in Washington has adjusted, gratuitously, during the six months intervening between the 1st of March and the 1st of September, 12,424 claims. Of these, 9,305 were allowed by the Government, and 3,119 were rejected. The cash value of the claims allowed was $2,456,115. Of the whole number there were for invalid pensions, 1,806; widows' pensions, 1,248; naval pensions, 27; arrears of pay and bounty, 8,881; prize money, 278; beside 184 other claims of the different classes. There are now 19,183 claims at the office of the Commission awaiting adjustment.

The Toronto Leader has this paragraph: "A statement is in circulation that on the occasion of the erection of the gilt cross on St. Michael's Cathedral in this city, the American flag was displayed above the Union Jack. We have been assured by persons who noticed the position of the flags on that occasion that the Union Jack was at the head, and the American flag was displayed low down on the staff. At an ordinary time such a statement might pass without notice, but at this moment a correction should be made."

Drafts in favor of the following persons, in payment of the amounts awarded them for aiding in the capture of the Presidential assassins, are still in possession of the United States Treasurer awaiting delivery to the parties in person: James W. Pundum, citizen, awarded $2,878 78, and privates Martin Kelley, David Barker, Wm. McQuade and Frederick Deitz, each awarded the sum of $1,653 84. Of the sum appropriated by Congress, over $100,000, all but the above amounts have been paid to the rightful claimants.

At the Tobacco Exchange in Richmond, Va., on Friday, a lot of tobacco raised by Mr. J. J. Adcock, of Granville County, North Carolina, was sold for one thousand dollars per hundred pounds. The Examiner says this is, without doubt, the largest price ever paid for tobacco—not alone in Richmond, but in the world. It is a beautiful golden yellow, and although of the present year's growth, is as perfect and as well matured in point of curing as though made last year.

An act passed by the Legislature of Kentucky in February, 1865, prohibiting members of the bar from going on the bond of any person presented to to the Louisville City or Circuit Courts, on any charge, or any magistrate in Jefferson County from taking such a bond, has just been decided to be constitutional in a test case brought before the Court of Appeals.

In the Circuit Court at Baltimore, on Saturday, in the case of Hugh Gelston against Mary Ann Frazier and others Judge Alexander filed a lengthy opinion, deciding that the Treasury notes of the United States, known as "legal tenders," were issued in violation of the Constitution. The Court says: "I am of opinion that the legal tender clause of the act of Congress referred to is unconstitutional and void." An appeal was taken to the Court of Appeals.

The Hartford Courant of Monday says "We have for some days past been in possession of facts connected with a bold and successful robbery of bonds to a large amount from the vaults of a city bank, which we have withheld from publication at the request of the parties interested. The amount stolen was, we learn, between $20,000 and $30,000." The same paper states that the amount so mysteriously stolen from the safe of Alfred S. Robinson, stock broker, was about $4,000—not $7,000, as stated.

During the seven months Major Jones, of Boston, has been at the head of the State Constabulary, 115 seizures of liquors have been made, and there are now in the hands of the officers about 10,000 gallons, worth some $40,000. In the same time the State Constables have made 5,227 prosecutions against liquor-sellers.

The investigation in reference to the violent death of Mrs. Miller, of Philadelphia, was concluded on Sunday. The Jury returned a verdict "that the deceased, Eliza M. Miller, came to her death at the hands of Gottlieb Williams, in her house, No. 924 Buttonwood-street, on the morning of Sept. 19, 1866." The Coroner committed Williams for trial.

The Charleston Courier of Friday says: "From a private letter which we have received from the estimable wife of the distinguished prisoner at Fortress Monroe, we learn with inexpressible regret that his health continues to decline, and that the pecuniary circumstances of his family are becoming very embarrassing."

The Republican Congressional Convention for the Third District, last night nominated S. B. Chittenden for the short term, a vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Humphrey, by a vote of 28 against 27 cast for Alderman Fisher. Mr. Chittenden was also nominated for the next Congress.

The proposition made to send from California a section of the "Original Big Tree" to the World's Fair at Paris, is said by Dr. Macgowan to be impracticable, for want of a saw long enough to cut it. The cutting will require a saw 40 feet long.

Dr. Robert Campbell, an old and respected citizen of Pittsfield, Mass., and a Director of the Western Railroad, committed suicide on Saturday afternoon by shooting himself through the head with a pistol.

John Harkins, of Boston, convicted of rape, was sentenced at Taunton, Mass., on Friday, to confinement in the State Prison for the term of his natural life; the first two days in solitary confinement, and the remainder at hard labor.

A new three-story building at Hillsdale, Mich., fell on Friday morning and crushed two other buildings. In one of the latter J. O. Dudley, his wife and child were killed. One child was rescued from the ruins alive.

The report of the State Auditor of Iowa shows that there are 700,598 cattle, 312,932 horses, 13,751 mules, 1,353,316 sheep and 61,214 swine in that State.

LOCAL NEWS.

In the law Courts, yesterday, there was very little done in the way of trying causes. It being the first day of a term after a long vacation, it was not expected by lawyers, litigants, witnesses or jurors that much would be accomplished. The usual panels of jurors were called in the several Courts. In the two parts of the Superior Court, two hundred and eight jurors in all were summoned to attend. Between forty and fifty of these attended and answered to their names. Some of these were excused for cause, and although there were enough in both branches to try a cause, the lawyers were not ready, and the Courts adjourned until this morning. The same may be said of the three Circuits and the two Trial Terms of the Common Pleas. In the latter Court, the case of Stewart, &c., vs. Thomas E. Davis was proceeded with before Judge Cardozo, without a Jury.

The New-York Evening High School was was opened with appropriate ceremonies last evening at Grammar School No. 35. The large hall was filled with young men, not less than six hundred being present. After speeches by members of the Board of Education and others, the registering of the names of pupils commenced. The books will be open for signature every evening this week, and appearances indicate that the attendance will be so large as to warrant the opening of still another Evening High School. The other Evening Schools entered upon their usual Winter course last evening, the number of pupils registered for regular attendance being 7,500. This number will be more than doubled during the Winter months.

The inquest in the case of the Rottigier family, who were burned to death at the tenement house fire on the 23d ult., at the corner of Avenue A and Thirteenth-street, was concluded yesterday by Coroner Gover. Some additional testimony was produced, but no new light thrown upon the origin of the fire beyond the fact that it was the act of an incendiary. In rendering their verdict, the Jury complimented Capt. Mount for his efforts in endeavoring to discover the perpetrators.

The case of alleged beating to death in a Greenwich-street brothel, came before Coroner Naumann and a Jury yesterday. The inquest failed to prove anything whatever against the prisoners, who were discharged on the rendering of the verdict that deceased died from natural causes. Dr. Shine, who was charged with precipitancy in granting a burial certificate, was exculpated, under the circumstances, by the Coroner.

Toby Fletcher, the colored man who stabbed his fellow-workman in Jersey City, was committed for trial by Recorder Martindale yesterday. His employer, Mr. Livingstone, testified to the fact that Fletcher was a bad man and a thief, having stolen a dog from him some time ago worth $250, and sold him for $15.

The Coroner's investigation of the alleged homicide in Communipaw Bay was continued yesterday, and resulted in the Jury failing to agree upon a verdict. The Coroner concluded to place the evidence before the Grand Jury, which meets to-day, and in the meantime the prisoner Monahan was committed to await their action.

Thos. Baldwin, aged 85 years, and residing in Sixty-ninth-street, was found yesterday floating in a pond near the corner of Fifth-avenue and Fifty-ninth-street. As he went out for a walk the night previous, it is supposed that he fell in and was drowned. An inquest will be held to-day.

At a meeting of the Board of Aldermen yesterday a communication was received from the Corporation Counsel stating that the law of 1866 providing for the election of five Councilmen in each Senatorial District is unconstitutional, and therefore void.

On the third Monday of this month a nolle prosequi will be entered in the United States Circuit Court in the case of Wm. R. Roberts, President of one of the brotherhoods of Fenians, and an order will be made canceling the bail bond given by him.

The annual meeting of the County Medical Society was held at the College of Physicians and Surgeons last evening, when officers were elected for the ensuing year, and amendments made to the by-laws.

The Court of General Sessions for the October term began yesterday. Only a few cases were disposed of. A Grand Jury will probably be impanneled to-day.

In the matter of the habeas corpus of Leopold Keifel, the Supreme Court has remanded the prisoner to the custody of the officer whence he was taken, and the writ dismissed.

A decree of divorce was yesterday granted by the Supreme Court of this District in the case of Eleanor C. Busiago vs. Antonio Busiago.

John Fink was before Commissioner Betts yesterday, on the charge of passing counterfeit fifty-cent currency. The examination was adjourned.

Yesterday morning Gen. Dix took possession of the Bureau of Naval Officer at the Custom-house. The Deputies were confirmed in office.

The number of deaths in this City last week was 487—72 less than the preceding week. Of these 38 were by cholera—23 less than the week previous.

John Kelly, laborer, fell from a derrick at the Novelty Works yesterday and was killed. Coroner Gamble will hold an inquest.

Gold advanced to 147 ℔ cent., and Exchange on London to 108⅝ ℔ cent., yesterday. The Funds of the United States were a fraction lower on the London telegrams. The Railway speculation was highly excited, and an immense business was done through the day, embracing nearly all descriptions. Erie sold up to 88 and New-York Central to 118 ℔ cent.

An active demand prevailed yesterday for Domestic Produce, especially Cotton, Pork and Breadstuffs, at decidedly firmer prices. Foreign merchandise was also in rather better request. The freight market was comparatively quiet.

The receipts of beef cattle for the past few days have been large. For this reason, beef is a trifle lower than it was last week. Yesterday the best cattle were selling at the National Drove Yards, One Hundredth-street, at 17½c. ℔ lb., net weight. Sales were quite slow, and prices favored buyers much more than sellers. Butchers and brokers parleyed for a long time before they could trade. There is a strong tendency downwards in the price of beef. There is no change in the price of milch cows and veals since last week. The arrivals of sheep and lambs are moderately large for the weekly supply, and trade was active yesterday at most of the yards. At some of the markets the sheep were common to good in quality, the best selling for 7c.@7½c. ℔ lb., live weight. Lambs were in moderate request yesterday, selling at 8c.@9c., and, in some instances, 9½c. ℔ lb., for the choicest lots. The demand for swine is active, the receipts large, and the price well up and firm at 11c.@11½c. ℔ lb., live weight, and 13½c.@14c. ℔ lb., dressed.

The State Election.

It is reasonably certain that the Democratic Party in this State will make no more by the Albany movement this year, than it did by its Syracuse dodge a year ago. That was the first election after the close of the war. Up to that time, their action as a party, had been against the National Administration, against the principles by which the war was justified and the measures by which it was carried on, against coercing the seceding States, against abolishing Slavery, either as a war measure or by amending the Constitution, and against the whole system of policy by which the Administration had sought to suppress the rebellion.

At Syracuse, in September, 1865, the Democratic Convention abandoned their old platform and adopted a new one—accepting the results of the war, acquiescing in the abolition of Slavery, indorsing the Administration elected by the Union Party, affirming principles almost identical with those of the Republicans, and selecting most of their candidates from men who had been prominent and active in the Republican ranks. Their object in all this was perfectly apparent. They sought their own reinstatement in power. Accepting Union principles, they were not willing to accept the Union Party; they accepted the principles, indeed, only to secure the overthrow of the party which had always held them. The purpose was not an honest one, and the People refused to aid or abet it. They would not trust the Democratic Party to carry into effect principles and measures they had always resisted, and which they espoused now only to regain place and power. They were overwhelmed at the November elections, as they deserved to be.

The Albany Convention was only a repetition of the same trick after better preparation, and under what were supposed to be better auspices. The Philadelphia Convention had indicated a strong desire, on the part of patriotic men in both sections, for a restoration of the Union upon just and Constitutional principles; and there was a large body of the people ready to waive their party relations for this specific purpose, and coöperate in measures to give this desire effect. The Democrats believed they could use this disposition for their own party purposes. They seized upon it—not to coöperate in carrying it out,—but to make it do their party work,—make it reconstruct their shattered organization, regain the public confidence they had forfeited, and restore the Democratic Party to its old ascendancy in the State and nation.

Every consideration connected with the public welfare demands that this attempt should be defeated. No disaster could be graver or more serious to the country, than the return of the old Democratic organization to place and power. The public good imperatively demands the defeat of Mr. Hoffman and the reelection of Gov. Fenton, by a majority at least as large as that which he received last year. In no other way can the determination of the people not to place the Government in the hands of that party which failed to defend it in its hour of peril, be made clear and unmistakable. The Democratic Party, as such—as an organized political body—is utterly and hopelessly discredited with the people. It has lost the power, if it had the will, to render the country any useful service. Its control is in the hands of the least patriotic and the most selfish and corrupt of its members. It aims only at selfish ends, and seeks them only by the most corrupt and unscrupulous means. The action of the Albany Convention was dictated by those who wield the power and share the spoils of office in the City of New-York. The dominant purpose which controlled that Convention, was the determination to resist reforms, perpetuate abuses and augment the corruptions which yield such lavish returns to men in office; and the welfare of the State as well as the interests of the City, demand that this design should be defeated.

The election of Gov. Fenton and the Union ticket by a decided majority at the coming election, following, as we have no doubt it will, similar results in other States, will break up effectually and finally the Democratic Party as it has been organized and directed for the last five years. It will compel its dissolution and reconstruction. Thoroughly defeated now, that party can never regain its strength or renew its successes. Properly reorganized, and animated by a new and higher spirit, it may still have a useful mission to perform in connection with the future career of the Republic. It may modify and moderate the action of rash and extreme men in the Union Party, and so help bring the Government to that golden mean which is always the path of practical wisdom and of national safety. But it can never regain public confidence, or be again intrusted by the people of the nation with the control of its public policy.

Prof. Agassiz and Cruelty to Animals.—It was hardly creditable to this city that Mr. Bergh should have found it necessary to fortify the common-sense opinion that boring holes through live turtles' claws gave them pain, by an appeal to Prof. Agassiz. But there was no alternative. The opponents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals assailed him with vituperation, and employed counsel to defend the perpetrators of cruelty. And the counsel, with truly ignoble instinct, found coarse jokes and supercilious ridicule their most effective weapons. We suppose that the Professor's opinion will be received with some respect, although even that may be doubtful.

The question whether the turtle is sensible to pain when mangled alive is not, however, the whole point at issue. It is asserted by those who have made the subject a study that there is a great deal of brutality toward dumb creatures, especially those used for food, and which can and ought to be prevented. A society may do much to remedy this, but the employers of the men who perpetrate these acts can do more. The treatment of the horse will fitly illustrate the matter. This willing slave of man is kicked and beaten daily in hundreds of instances to an extent hardly credible. The men who do this work are entrusted with property which they deteriorate by their fierceness, and where the owner knows it he has a short remedy. So with the methods of slaughtering animals—where a report is made of cruelty by an employe, the employer being informed thereof, is morally responsible therefor. And so on in a great variety of other matters. We hope that the general subject will receive more attention than it does. The young men and children who are to be intrusted with so great an inheritance as our Republic should not be rendered familiar with and indifferent to the torturing of poor creatures that are at the mercy of us who call ourselves a superior order of beings.

The Latest Franco-Mexican Convention and the Treaty of Miramar.

We published in Saturday's Times the text of the latest Franco-Mexican Convention. That instrument was signed at Mexico on the 30th of July last, and approved at St. Cloud on the 12th of September. Its provisions can, perhaps, be best interpreted by recalling some of the stipulations of the Convention of Miramar. By the last-named treaty, which was signed on the 10th of April, 1864, the mutual obligations of the French Emperor and his protégé were defined with tolerable distinctness. Under the Protectorate the French troops, including the foreign legion, were to be speedily reduced to a force of 20,000 men. The reduction was to be made in proportion as the Mexican Government should be able to get local recruits to replace those withdrawn. By Article 3 of the Convention the foreign legion in the service of France, consisting of 8,000 men, were to remain in Mexico for six years after all the other French troops had been recalled; for what purpose is made apparent enough in Article 9 of the same agreement. In that it was provided that the expenses of the French expedition amounting then to 270,000,000 francs, and bearing interest at the rate of three per cent. per annum, were to be collected out of the Mexican revenues, with 1,000 francs a year for each French soldier retained in Mexico after the date of the contract. Maximilian's Government furthermore agreed, by Article 11 of the Miramar Convention, to hand over at once to the French Emperor upon the ratification of the instrument, the sum of 66,000,000 of francs in bonds; 54,000,000 francs of which were to be deducted from the gross indebtedness already named, and 12,000,000 francs paid as indemnity for the wrongs alleged to have been suffered by French subjects at the hands of former Mexican Governments.

Such were the essential points in the Treaty of Miramar, and since that agreement was signed no other convention between the high contracting parties, modifying its provisions or intended to replace it, is known to exist, except that, the text of which appeared in Saturday's Times. Diplomatic notes have been exchanged between our own Government and the Emperor of the French, which have been held as abrogating the essential provisions of the Miramar Treaty; or as indicating, at least, a disposition on the part of the French Government to recede absolutely from those political pretensions which it set up at Soledad, and which caused the premature rupture of the ill-advised Tripartite Alliance. But until the appearance of this last Convention between Prince Maximilian and his Imperial protector, signed at the Capital of Mexico on the 30th of July last, the extent to which the Emperor of the French had receded from his former position was certainly not known in any authoritative way. In view of that, we recommend that those who wish clearly to understand what are the present and prospective relations of the French Government to that of Maximilian, should carefully weigh the terms of the new compact.

It is important, for instance, to note that in this July Convention, the French Government does not recede (although the last item in the treaty declares the abrogation of the financial engagements of 1864) a single step from the financial position it took up at Miramar as the creditor of the inchoate Mexican Empire. It proceeds to stipulate that one-half the gross receipts from customs at the ports of Mexico shall be assigned to the French Government; that as the customs export duties at ports on the Pacific are already pledged to the extent of the three-fourths of this new assignment, France shall limit her claim to 25 per cent. of these specific dues. The sum of the indebtedness of Mexico to France in 1864 is distinctly reaffirmed in this instrument. That sum, less the issue of bonds to the amount of 66,000,000 francs agreed to at Miramar, was $216,000,000, which has since increased approximately to 250,000,000 francs. If this should happen to fall short of covering all the claims of France, the Emperor's Government reserves to itself the right to revise the account and add to the bill. If the receipts of customs at Mexican ports should increase, the due proportion of such increase is to inure to the benefit of the Imperial creditor. And after the payment of interest on the gross debt, at the rate of 3 per cent., the balance is to go toward the reduction of the principal.

At Vera Cruz and Tampico these customs collections are to be made by special agents, "placed under the protection of the French flag," and in the other Mexican ports French Consular agents are to have an opportunity of inspecting receipts and reporting thereupon. Maximilian is not even permitted to determine upon any other plan of meeting his obligations. But the Emperor of the French is to fix the time during which his collecting agents shall remain at the ports designated.

There is nothing at all, it will be seen, of a sentimental or speculative character in this compact. It deals, from first to last, with matters of the most practical kind. It assumes not only that there is still an old-standing debt due by Mexico to French subjects for wrongful treatment, but it sums up, with the keenest exactness, the constantly accruing indebtedness of Maximilian's Government for the material aid received from France. It assumes the permanence of the Empire, and takes that apparently as a collateral guarantee—if not, indeed, as the prime assurance—for the payment of the French claims. If such a compact means anything it means that the material, if not the political, interest of the French Government in the maintenance of the Mexican Imperial system is as great to-day as when the Convention was signed at Miramar. In this light it certainly will be regarded by our people generally.

Our Rival Admirers.

There is now as great a desire displayed by the different nations of Europe to obtain the friendship of this country as there were contempt and enmity for us two or three years ago. The enthusiastic reception of our naval officers by the Emperor and people of Russia, and the idea that it symbolizes a close and permanent alliance between the two countries, has increased the rivalry of other Powers to obtain a place in our affections. Each of them puts forth strong claims to our attention. The English writers argue with new vigor that America and England are the two free countries of the world—that they have the "same language and law, the same literature and Bible," and consequently should have the same political sympathies, interests and aims. The French writers argue that the United States are the natural ally of France, because the tendencies of both peoples are to democracy and liberalism, and because they have many old souvenirs of friendship. The German writers regard this country, with its millions of Teutonic inhabitants, as a sort of new Germany, between which and the old Fatherland friendship is natural and a moral alliance necessary, while the fact that there can be no antagonism of interest removes a chief cause of national animosities. The Russian writers of course show the best ground for the endurance of the general amity which exists between the American and Russian peoples, and predict that the greatest and happiest results will flow from it. They refer to the friendship of Russia for this country during our war, and anticipate its enlargement and reciprocation in the struggles of the future. In all quarters, in fact, we have ardent admirers. Concerning some of them, we find it difficult to tell what we shall think, when we consider their past course and conduct. But let all of them demean themselves respectfully toward us for a century or so, and by that time we shall be ready to take into consideration their propositions for an alliance.

The Northern Fire-eaters.—Those terrible fellows, the Southern fire-eaters, were swept out of existence by the tempest of war which they brought upon the country. Where now are the Yanceys, Rhetts, Toombses, and the class of men whom they represented? Where are the fierce and furious speeches with which they used to inflame the nation, and by means of which they finally "fired the Southern heart and precipitated the Cotton States into revolution." Gone—forever and wholly gone. But in their stead we have now a small and equally terrible set of Northren Fire-eaters—men of the same narrow and extreme cast of mind, the same hot and uncontrollable passions, the same fierce language. the same ambitious purposes. They live by firing the Northern heart, by playing upon the sectional feelings, and by embroiling the popular passions. There must be a check put upon them by the common sense and reason of the people, or they will yet bring the country into a state of turmoil equally terrible with that from which it has just emerged.

The Health of the City.—Notwithstanding the frequent changes in the weather, from cold to temperate heat, and from rain to sunshine, it is evident from the mortality record of the week, that the health of the City is, generally, as good as it has been for many years past. The Health Commissioners may fairly be congratulated on the results of their arduous Summer labors. It is impossible, of course, even to conjecture how much greater the ravages of the cholera would have been if we had been left during the trying Midsummer season at the mercy of the old sanitary regulations. But from the character of the localities where the scourge has this year been most severely felt, it is certain that its visitation would have been vastly more disastrous but for the vigilance, the industry and the effective strength with which the operations of the Health Board were conducted, and the judgment especially which marked their action in dealing with the overcrowded haunts in the lower Wards.

The South and the Freedmen.—We hail with satisfaction every evidence that reaches us from the Southern States of consideration and magnanimity toward the freed black people on the part of the dominant white race. We chronicle them with all the more pleasure because of the eagerness exhibited by certain journals to discover or invent cases in which negroes have been treated cruelly or unjustly by those who were their former masters. Of course a story of the latter character, be it true or false, if it be set forth in the highest sensational or haranguing fashion, tells with a thousand times more effect than volumes of an opposite kind. But still we feel assured that in time the whole matter will come to be properly appreciated by the country, and that the just and humane legislation which has been adopted in South Carolina and other States, together with the wise and temperate action of the courts of law and the humanity of the planters, as a class, will teach the Northern people that the rights of the blacks can be best secured to them by the voluntary action of those who have the making of the laws, the administration of justice and the control of labor.

We published the other day the measures for securing the civil rights of the freedmen which have just been passed at the special session of the South Carolina Legislature, and a short time since we published from one of our correspondents in Georgia an account of the operations of the free labor system in that State, and of the kindly relations that are being established between the two races. Yesterday we gave a charge which has been made to an Alabama Grand Jury by Judge Clayton, who was formerly a general officer in the rebel service, which charge was largely occupied with a discussion of the treatment of the blacks of Alabama. Theoretically, the Judge does not believe liberty to be the proper condition of the black race; but, as the circumstance of their freedom is now irrevocably fixed, he would recognize it as a fact, and make the best of it that is possible. He demands, as a Judge, that they be treated with perfect fairness and justice in all labor contracts, and in every way in which the Southern people are brought into contact with them. He enforces and elaborates this idea with great vigor. He urges it, firstly, because of its inherent wisdom; secondly, because of the necessity of negro labor to Southern prosperity; and thirdly, because the Southern people should be grateful to the negro for his faithfulness to his master in the days of distress and war. He says:

> "Shall it excite our animosity that he has been suddenly, and without any effort on his part, torn loose from the protection of his master? You may have been that master. He is proud to call you master yet. In the name of humanity, let him do so." "During the war," continued Judge Clayton, "did not the negro raise the corn and meat that fed your wife and children? And when you returned home, did he not welcome you with tears of joy? Was he not faithful to the last? I believe there was scarcely ever such a picture of fidelity in the world as was exhibited by the negroes toward us during the war."

We earnestly trust that all the Southern Legislatures which meet during the coming Winter will, by securing the civil rights of the freedmen, and establishing for their benefit a system of education, approve themselves possessed of just and humane ideas concerning the treatment of this lately enslaved and oppressed race. And we trust that in the general administration of justice the Courts of the South will enforce the principles so earnestly urged by Judge Clayton.

A Brutal Style of Political Discussion.—A violent partisan journal published at Richmond still speaks of the murdered President as the "King Ape." Not to be outdone in this line of discussion, Mr. Thaddeus Stevens, in a public speech the other day, thus referred to Mr. Seward:

> "The elder clown, owing to the wear and tear of age and suffering—you know he had his arm broken, and his jaw broken, and his neck broken almost—inducing a necessity for certain opiates, which had very much worn down his vigor."

This mode of dealing with political opponents no doubt is deemed exceedingly effective by a certain class. But surely no one who aims to think independently and to act honestly can help deploring, deeply and sadly, that party advocates should find audiences, either great or small, either ignorant or intelligent, that could tolerate such a style of warfare. It is grossly insulting to the whole community.

Mr. Raymond and the French Mission —The Tribune's Accuracy.

To the Editor of the New-York Tribune:

Sir: I find the following paragraph in your Washington correspondence:

> The French Mission.—As Gen. Dix has declined the French mission, both Raymond and Stanton are working for it, but as the President does not feel kindly to the former, it is not likely he will get it.

So far as I am concerned, this statement is utterly untrue. Not only have I never "worked for" the mission to France, but I have never, directly or indirectly, personally or through others, applied for that or any other office, at home or abroad, in the gift of the Government. Nor have I any reason to believe that anybody has ever sought or suggested my appointment to any such place. Twice in my life I have been asked to accept a foreign appointment; in neither case did I consent.

I am aware that this report of my seeking or desiring the French mission has been industriously kept afloat in the newspapers for two or three years. It has served the purpose of explaining, upon some selfish and interested basis, public action on my part which a portion of the press were unwilling to ascribe to any better motive. But it never had the slightest foundation in truth. I do not remember having ever spoken to the President or Secretary of State about the French mission, but once, and that was to suggest, in case of a vacancy, the appointment of Gen. Dix.

Yours, &c., H. J. RAYMOND.

In publishing the above the Tribune remarks that "it ends the newspaper discussion upon the subject." That is very well so far as it goes; but would it not be worth the Tribune's while to inquire how that discussion began, so far as its columns are concerned? How did its correspondent happen to make a statement on the subject at once so explicit and so false? Did he invent it deliberately, or did he print it carelessly as the best thing he could think of to say just at the moment? Did somebody tell him it was true, and if so who?

A week or two since, in a very complacent prospectus, the Tribune proclaimed its determination to publish the simple truth, without prejudice or bias, personal or political, and added:

> "We retain no one in our service who falsifies to help what he might consider the cause of the Tribune, or who suppresses truth when it happens to be injurious to our arguments."

These are excellent sentiments, but we beg to remind the Tribune that they seem to be kept wholly for ornament and not at all for use. The report concerning the French mission affords an illustration. Others can be found in the files of the Tribune during the last Winter, especially wherever and whenever the name of Mr. Raymond happens to be mentioned.

For example: The Tribune's Washington correspondent stated as a fact that Mr. Raymond had called the National Union Executive Committee together, and had, in their meeting, endeavored to persuade them to transfer the funds of the Committee to the Johnson Club. No such meeting was held or called. The whole statement, in every particular, was utterly without foundation.

Soon afterward the Tribune reported Mr. Raymond as having said sundry things in caucus which he not only did not say, but every one of which was exactly the reverse of what he did say.

In describing the last day's session of the Philadelphia Convention the Tribune's "special correspondent" said that Mr. Raymond, after reading the address, went to Mr. Weed upon the platform, to receive his congratulations. Mr. Weed was not in the Convention, nor in Philadelphia—having left the city on the preceding day.

So in describing the proceedings of the Albany Convention, it was stated that Mr. Raymond called first upon this man and then upon that—that he was now in conference with one person and then with another—the rooms at the Delavan being specified in which he was from time to time said to be engaged. In point of fact Mr. Raymond was not in Albany at all, and had not been for six months.

These are a few of the many instances in which the Tribune has made statements concerning Mr. Raymond which were utterly untrue, and which must have been deliberately fabricated, by its correspondent or somebody else, either to "help" the Tribune or from some other motive. Not one of these falsifications has been corrected. They were intended to produce a certain result and have probably done it. And we say, what an examination of the Tribune's files will sustain, that not only in the cases referred to, but in regard to all public men and public questions which enlist discussion, the Tribune's statements of fact are uniformly distorted so as to suit its own opinions. That the public is misled and deceived by such a mode of reporting news, is an evil which we are not especially called on to rebuke or reform; but we have a right to complain of it when we ourselves are made the victims of a steady and deliberate persistence in it.

Personal.

Mr. Simeon Leland left this City this morning, in company with Mr. Horace Leland, late of the Metropolitan, and Mr. Charles Leland, late of the Occidental Hotel in San Francisco, en route for Springfield, Ill., where, under the firm name of Horace Leland & Co., the two latter gentlemen will open a new and magnificent hotel called the Leland House. The eminent success which attends every new enterprise of this driving family of hosts is the natural sequence to long and studied experience in matters pertaining to their specialty. The Metropolitan in New-York, the Union at Saratoga, and the Occidental in San Francisco, are monuments to their skill, patience and enterprise, added to which, we doubt not, will be an extra meed of reputable popularity by the management of the Leland House at Springfield.

Dedication of a Catholic Church.

Charleston, Monday, Oct. 1.

The new Catholic Church was dedicated yesterday by Bishop Lynch. The rebuilding of the cathedral will be pushed forward.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

Washington, Monday, Oct. 1.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE ORIGINAL UNION MEN OF ALEXANDRIA WAIT UPON THE PRESIDENT.

This afternoon a delegation from Alexandria, Va., waited upon the President of the United States, and presented to him the address of the original Union men of that city and vicinity and of the Union men of the adjoining counties who indorse and approve the action of the Johnson Conservative Association in support of the policy of the President. The speaker for the delegation said in the conclusion of his address that the meeting at which the resolutions submitted were adopted, was largely attended by those who were loyal to the Government of their fathers and true to the flag of their country when a man hazarded his life by declaring that he was a Union man in Virginia. They would say to the President that they are ready and willing to stand by him and defend the Constitution of the country from any attack that may come against it or him from his enemies East, West, North or South.

The President said in reply that the cordial expression of confidence in him which was presented in the address, was at this time peculiarly acceptable, and calculated to inspire him with renewed determination to pursue the course he had been pursuing, until the struggle agitating the country was ended. He would refer to his past course as a conclusive indication and assurance of his action in the future, and he trusted that nothing he might do would ever lead any to think that their confidence in him had been misplaced. It was his design to effect, as speedily as possible, a restoration of peace and harmony throughout the whole country.

At the conclusion of these remarks the members of the Committee were introduced to the President, and after a pleasant interview withdrew.

REVENUE DECISION.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has just made the following important decision respecting boot and shoe makers who manufacture custom work:

Treasury Department,
Office of Internal Revenue,
Washington, Sept. 28, 1866.

Sir: Your letter of the 6th inst., inclosing a statement from your assistant, Weis, relative to custom boot and shoe makers, was duly received. In answer I have to say that the recent law of Congress exempts any boot or shoe maker making boots or shoes to order as custom work only, whose work, exclusive of materials, does not exceed annually in value $1,000. You will perceive that this is a conditional exemption of boot and shoe makers from taxation. The conditions are two. First, they must manufacture custom work only; and, second, the work, exclusive of the materials, must not exceed annually in value one thousand dollars. In order to determine the amount or value of work, exclusive of materials, the value or cost of the materials is to be deducted from the sales' value of the boots or shoes manufactured. If the difference between these two sums is less than or only equal to $1,000, the boot or shoe maker is exempt; but if it is more than $1,000, he is taxable, and the extent of his liability is to be determined in the same manner as any other manufacturer under the provisions of section ninety-three. A boot or shoe maker claiming exemption under this provision of law as being engaged exclusively in the manufacture of custom-work, must be required to make monthly returns of products, sales and value or cost of materials, used or consumed, if in the opinion of the Assessor there is a probability that he will exceed the limit of exemption; but no assessment is to be made until the limit of $1,000 has been reached, even should the monthly rate of work, exclusive of materials, exceed eighty-three and one-third. When the limit of one thousand dollars has been passed, then an assessment on back returns is to be made, subject to the limitations and exemptions of section 93.

E. A. ROLLINS, Commissioner.

T. C. Moore, U. S. Assessor, Peoria, Ill.

SANTA ANNA AND MEXICO.

Santa Anna, R. Clay Crawford and several other Mexican adventurers, returned to New-York to-night. Santa Anna is said to have had an interview with Secretary Seward yesterday, but what is to come of it no one knows. It is the general impression here that the operations of these men are with an eye to their sole and individual benefit, and that they intend very little good to the Liberal cause. It is also reported that two more vessels with arms are to be dispatched to Mexico by these men, as a matter of speculation entirely.

THE PUBLIC DEBT.

The public debt statement will not be out until the 5th inst., owing to some necessary delay in getting the cash balances from the various sources.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

Mr. Chandler, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will return from New-Hampshire this week.

PUBLIC LANDS TAKEN UP.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has received returns from the Land Office at Marysville Cal., showing that during August, 3,061 acres of the public lands were disposed of, 2,900 acres having been sold for cash, and the remainder taken up under the Homestead Act. The returns from other States show that the entries of lands have everywhere increased in extent during the last three months.

DENIAL OF THE REPORT OF THE SALE OF NEGROES IN ALABAMA.

Major-Gen. Wagner Swayne, Assistant Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau at Montgomery, Ala., reports that, upon investigation, no foundation could be ascertained for a report which had been circulated that two freedmen had been sold as slaves.

A COLORED LAWYER.

A motion was made in the Criminal Court of this District to-day to admit to practice Jonathan J. Wright, a colored man, of Pennsylvania, who has been engaged in his profession at the bar of the Freedmen's Courts in South Carolina. The Court appointed three lawyers to examine into his qualifications. This is the first application of a colored man to be admitted to the bar of our District Courts.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.

The President to-day appointed Timothy J. Carter, of Illinois, Charles T. Sherman, of Ohio, George Ashmun, of Massachusetts, Springer Harbough, of Pennsylvania, and Jesse L. Williams, of Indiana, United States Government Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company until the first Wednesday in October, 1867.

Among the appointments made by the President to-day were B. F. Tracy, to be United States District-Attorney for the Eastern District of New-York; Francis L. Dallon, United States Marshal for same district; James H. Parsons, United States District-Attorney for Rhode Island; and Caleb P. Johnson, United States Marshal for Delaware.

The President has also appointed Owen Thurston Register of Land Office, Humbolt, Kansas, and John R. Miller Collector of Internal Revenue in the Seventeenth District of Ohio.

John B. Smith, of Milwaukee, was to-day appointed Assessor of Internal Revenue for the First Wisconsin District, vice C. A. Bronson, removed.

CONSULS APPOINTED.

Major-Gen. Morgan L. Smith, of Missouri, has been appointed Consul at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, vice Caldwell, recalled, and Brig.-Gen. William L. Duff, of Illinois, who was Chief of Artillery on Gen. Grant's staff, has been appointed Consul to Glasgow, vice Bailey, recalled.

GEN. AVERILL APPOINTED CONSUL-GENERAL TO CANADA.

Major-Gen. William W. Averill has been appointed Consul-General to the British North American Provinces, to reside at Montreal, vice J. P. Potter, resigned.

ANOTHER STAMP TAX.

The stamp tax of one per cent. per pound on canned fruits, fish, meat and vegetables, went into effect to-day, and renders liable all the foregoing articles offered for sale which have previously paid the five or six per cent. ad valorem tax.

GEN. ROBINSON ASKS TO BE MUSTERED OUT.

Brevet Brig.-Gen. H. L. Robinson, lately in charge of the military railroads, has made a request to be mustered out of service.

LOSSES BY THE FLOOD.

Hon. L. D. Campbell, Minister to Mexico, lost a large amount of property by the recent flood in Butler County, Ohio.

The Cholera at Nashville and Memphis.

Nashville, Monday, Oct. 1.

Twenty-one cholera deaths occurred during the last twenty-four hours of Sept. 30, and fifteen deaths to-day.

Memphis, Monday, Oct. 1.

Seventy-one new cases of cholera occurred during the last twenty-four hours. There were but twenty four deaths in the last forty-eight hours, indicating a great decrease.

LOCAL POLITICS.

THE COMING CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN.

Names of the Prominent Candidates for Republican and Democratic Nominations—Nominations in Kings County Last Night.

Although great activity prevails in the several Congressional Districts of this City and vicinity, there is as yet little beyond preliminary gossip as to probabilities. In several of the Districts the Conventions will be held this week, and so far as they are concerned, the results are clearly foreshadowed, but in the others great confusion and much uncertainty befog the political future.

THE SECOND DISTRICT

is in Kings County, embracing the county township and several of the Brooklyn Wards. The Radical Republicans have named their candidate—Mr. James A. Van Brunt, formerly an Alderman of the Eighth Ward, and at present the President of the Coney Island Railway. The Democratic Convention will meet on Wednesday, and select a candidate from the following-named gentlemen: Messrs. Demas Barnes, Martin Kalbfleisch, Tunis G. Bergen, Edwin B. Litchfield—the probabilities being in favor of Mr. Barnes.

THE THIRD DISTRICT

is also in Kings County, embracing all that part of Brooklyn not included in the Second.

The Republican Convention met last Saturday night, but after a stormy session, which continued into the early Sabbath, adjourned without making a nomination. Last night it reassembled, it being generally understood that the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Humphrey should be contested on the part of the Republicans by Mr. Geo. H. Fisher, and the nomination for the Fortieth Congress be given to Mr. S. B. Chittenden. A very violent and stormy session resulted from the unexpected claim made in behalf of Mr. Chittenden for both nominations. An informal ballot declared 28 votes for Mr. Chittenden, 27 for Mr. Fisher, and 1 for Mr. Lincoln—being one more vote than there were members. After a long and bitterly personal contest, Mr. Chittenden was nominated for the vacancy. A series of parliamentary tactics followed, and speeches in favor of Mr. Lincoln were made by Mr. Scholes and others, and in favor of Mr. Chittenden by Messrs. Campbell, Benedict and others, amid the wildest confusion and disorder in which the outsiders participated. The ballot developed 33 votes for Mr. Chittenden, and he was declared the candidate.

The Democratic Convention, which meets on Wednesday, will select from the following-named gentlemen: Assessor Wm. E. Robinson, John D. McKenzie, Grenville T. Jenks. The probabilities are that the nomination for both terms will be given to Mr. Robinson, who is urged by Collector Pratt and Gen. Slocum, although Postmaster Kinsella and his friends prefer Mr. McKenzie.

THE FOURTH DISTRICT

is blessed with many candidates for the nomination, as follows:

Republican—Hiram Walbridge.

Democratic—Benjamin Wood, Gen. McMahon, Gen. M. W. Burns, John Y. Savage.

As yet the Republicans have not made many indications in this District, and it is rumored that some compromise may be effected which will virtually leave but one strong ticket in the field.

In the

the contest in the Democratic camp is narrowed to the friends of Messrs. Nelson Taylor and John Morrissey, although certain parties are urging the claims of Deputy Sheriff T. H. Ferris.

In the

SIXTH DISTRICT

Col. Rush C. Hawkins and Chas. S. Spencer are contending for the Radical nomination, and Messrs. E. B. Hart, S. S. Cox, Udolpho Wolf, Rob. W. Holmes and Col. Price are presented for the Democratic nomination.

In the

SEVENTH DISTRICT

Messrs. Thos. J. Creamer, Harney Calkins, Winthrop Chanler, Goodrich A. Fay, Daniel M. O'Brien, Luke T. Cozzens and Owen Murphy are canvassed by the Democrats; Messrs. Geo F. Steinbremer and Merwin R. Brewer by the Republicans.

In the

Mr. James Brooks is the only name prominently mentioned by the Democracy, as against Messrs. Wm. E. Dodge, Geo. E. McClean, or Robert B. Roosevelt by the Republicans.

In the

the canvass has not yet fairly opened. It seems to be generally understood that Fernando Wood intends to run again, in which event Anson Herrick is expected to receive a Tammany nomination against him. Hon. Wm. A. Darling will probably be renominated by the Republicans, and the contest will thus be merely a repetition of that two years ago, in which he was successful.

Twentieth Ward German Radical, Fenton and Woodford Campaign Club.

This Club held a regular meeting last evening at their rooms, at Haukle's hotel, on Ninth-avenue, near Thirty-fourth-street.

The meeting was duly called to order by the President of the Club, Frederick Schultz.

At a previous meeting of the Club a series of resolutions were passed indorsing the State ticket nominated at Syracuse, and also in reference to a modification of the Excise Law, of which the following is a translation:

While we admit that a law regulating the sale of liquor should be passed, we will yet insist upon those who come forward to be elected, as members of the Legislature of the State, to pledge themselves in favor of a modification of the law by which the working man can be enabled to enjoy the only day in the week in harmless and innocent amusement.

Resolved, That the Board of Health should appoint Inspectors of the breweries, who should be expert, and test every brew before any of it is allowed to be sold, so that the people receive a good and healthy drink instead of the impure and adulterated article now received in the City.

The meeting was addressed in the German language by Alfred Erke, formerly editor of the German Democrat of this City, and by Dr. Adolphe Douai, principal of the Hoboken Academy. The addresses were of a character fully indorsing the nomination of Fenton and Woodford, and upon the great national issues of the day, and they very strenuously insisted upon a modification of the excise laws.

The club at present numbers 160 members.

Sixth Assembly District Fenton and Woodford Campaign Club.

This Club held a meeting last evening at their room on the southeast corner of Grand and Clinton streets. A series of resolutions were passed indorsing the State nominations made by the Syracuse Convention, and congratulating the Union people of the State upon the recent victories in Maine and Vermont.

The meeting was addressed by Enos Elliott, Esq., President of the Club; by William H. Burleigh, of New-York, and J. C. Van Riper, Esq., of New-Jersey.

The subject of each speaker's address was the different modes of reconstruction, the difference between Congress and the President, and the necessity of requiring the rebel States to adopt the Constitutional Amendment before they should be admitted to representation in Congress.

Fenton and Woodford Mass Meeting.

The Committee of Arrangements appointed by the Republican Union General Committee to make arrangements for a mass meeting to ratify the nominations made at Syracuse, met yesterday, Mr. Chas. S. Spencer occupying the chair.

It was decided that the mass meeting shall take place on Monday, Oct. 15, at Cooper Institute. Mr. Wm. E. Dodge will preside. Gov. Fenton and Gen. Fremont will be among the speakers. Govs. Curtin, Cox and Hawley, and many other distinguished persons have been invited to be present.

It was announced that the General Committee have appointed all their sub-committees, and that hereafter their headquarters will be at Argus Hall, No. 600 Broadway, where they will meet to-night.

Republican Union Executive Committee.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican Union General Committee, took place yesterday at No. 362 Broadway for the purpose of organization. Mr. Waldo Hutchins was elected Chairman; Mr. John H. White, Vice-Chairman; Chas. S. Strong and Wm. Drummond, Secretaries.

Kings County Politics.

John S. Allen, Ex-Postmaster of Williamsburgh, was last night nominated to the Assembly by the Union Republican Convention of the Sixth Assembly District. In the Seventh Assembly Convention there was a failure to nominate, the friends of Capt. Short and Hon. Ira Buckman refusing to compromise. An adjournment took place until Saturday night.

The Democratic (regular) primaries took place last night. In the Fourteenth Ward there was a very exciting time—four distinct tickets being in the field. Capt. Woglom and a large force of men, however, prevented any breach of the peace. The ticket headed "Union" was declared successful.

Gen. Dix Installed as Naval Officer.

Yesterday morning at 10 o'clock Gen. Dix took formal possession of the Bureau of Naval Officer at the Custom-house. The properties of the various departments were duly transferred by Mr. Cornell S. Franklin, who has been officiating as Naval Officer since the death of Mr. Odell. The deputies officiating for some time have been confirmed in their positions. Mr. Franklin has been appointed Special Deputy, and upon him, in case of the death or protracted illness of the superior officer, the duties of the department will necessarily fall. The other deputies are Messrs. William Usher and John T. Shaw. This, it would seem, sets at rest the question as to whether or not Gen. Dix will accept the Ambassadorship to France. Nevertheless it is rather a significant fact that the dwelling house of the General, situated at the corner of Twenty-fifth street and Fifth-avenue, is offered for sale by E. H. Ludlow & Co., for $45,000.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatre Francais.—The play of "Queen Elizabeth" was produced here last night with complete success. It depicts the smaller side of England's greatest Queen, and serves excellently as a companion piece to Schiller's "Maria Stuart," which shows the smaller side of that heroine, but the prettiest. It exhibits also the infinite range of woman's whim, and the value which in the sex is attached to a condition of dependant love. The story of the plot is an old one. It has been served in many forms and always successfully. It is simply that of Essex, who, receiving a ring from the Queen in her favor, and knowing that it will give him pardon, freedom and life, refuses these boons—when they might vitally serve him—in his great indignation at her coquettish cruelty. Coquetry and overwhelming harshness are the qualities exhibited by Mme. Ristori in this effective piece. They are the smaller vices of a large nature. The whole tone of the drama, indeed, is beneath the pitch of tragedy, and, from its vagueness and incertitude, a little above that of comedy; but it tells a story in which a man shows himself with remarkable distinctness. It would have been better for the company had this been the initial piece. Signor Glech, of whom we have heretofore had occasion to speak in terms of moderation, was in the third act superb. His indignation at the affront put on him by his sovereign; his large heart-beating, defiant bearing to all her friends, and quiet, repressed, but clearly sacrificed bending to herself, were in the highest degree artistical. We doubt greatly if a more impassionate, yet subdued piece of acting has been seen on the American stage. Mme. Ristori, who needs nothing at our hands, for she is always good, is the representative of the purely womanly nature on the stage. In this piece it takes a lesser form than it has done before, being especially pettish, but every trait is clearly marked. Her scene with the Spanish Ambassador can hardly be spoken of without a knowledge of the particular powers of exulation to which she gave expression, and which few can describe who are not in active sympathy with a female mind in extreme agitation and bending after great tribulation to a sense of perfect triumph. The scene, indeed, was worthy of the commendation bestowed on the lady's previous efforts in "Medea" and "Maria Stuart," as also were other particular portions in the fourth and fifth acts, a consideration—if the word may be used—we defer to another occasion. The peformance terminated at a late hour, but we are fortunate in being able to record its complete success, and to look with pleasure to Wednesday evening, when the play will be repeated.

Ristori in Brooklyn.—Mme. Ristori will make her second appearance in Brooklyn to-night, on which occasion she will present her most pleasing character, Mary Stuart.

THE SUPPOSED TRAGEDY IN COMMUNIPAW COVE.

The Inquest on Young Conroy—Monday, Second Days' Proceedings—Disagreement of the Jury.

The inquest on the body of the boatman, Jas. Conroy, who is supposed to have come to his death by violence at the hands of Thos. Monahan in Communipaw Cove, on Sunday night week, was continued before Coroner Kirsten, at the Almshouse in Jersey City yesterday morning. The following testimony was taken:

George Conroy (brother of the deceased) being sworn, testified: I reside at No. 115 Essex-street; I am 20 years of age, and a boatman in Mr. Snellgrove's employ; was at my business at Snellgrove's boat-house on Sunday, the 22d; was there all day; the boat is on south side of the Morris Canal, foot of Essex-street; my brother was with me all day, and remained there until he went out in the boat with Thos. Monahan; Monahan and three other men came there at 12 o'clock that day, had four drinks a piece, and got a bottle of whisky each; Monahan got a pint bottle full of Bourbon whisky; did not see my brother take any drinks with them; my brother let a boat to each of them for a row; they all paid except Monahan; after the bartender came back from dinner, I went fishing; I returned about 4 P. M.; Monahan came back about 7 o'clock; the four men were not intoxicated when I left; Monahan came back in a boat that he had taken from the pile-driver, and was followed by other men; and when near a sunken canal-boat, they cried out: "Catch the ——; murder or drown him;" Monahan made fast to the dock and went up and got a drink and the other man who got in with him took the boat away; I was up to the bar-room counting the money, and when I went down to the dock my brother had shoved off with Monahan; told my brother he ought not to take that boat; it was because Monahan was drunk; do not consider the boat unsafe; did not hear Monahan have any dispute with my brother; when I told my brother he ought not to take that boat, he replied that he guessed he knew how to row, and I said, "I guess you do; they left between 7:30 and 8 o'clock, and it was quite dark; did not hear any cry of distress; the water was calm; I remained at the boat house until 11 o'clock that night; about 9 o'clock I took a boat and rowed to all the pile drivers and inquired for Whitehead, (the prisoner) and no one knew anything about him; my brother was not intoxicated.

To a Juror—My brother was an experienced oarsman: never knew him have his oar "crab;" think it might have done in consequence of Monahan being drunk; think the boat, keel up, would hold one man; my brother was an experienced swimmer; in upsetting, the oar could not strike a man on the head.

Wm. W. Duryea testified as to finding the body of the deceased, in company with Thomas Moulds, on Friday afternoon last, near the crib work of the Central Railroad, inside.

Alexander Hamilton (colored,) sworn: I reside in Bergen, and follow oystering; was on our way to New-York on Monday morning last, between 6 and 7 o'clock; started from Communipaw shore in company with Samuel Johnson; heard a man hallooing to us from the piles on the turnpike bridge, and rowed up to him; he was on a cross-piece under the bridge; we took him off and landed him on the bridge; the prisoner present is the person; he said that he started for the pile-driver, that the boat upset, and he reckoned his partner was drowned; think all he had on was a shirt and pants; said he got there in the night; he could not get away from where we found him without assistance, except by swimming.

Wm. Whitley, testified: I am Overseer of the Poor; saw Thomas Monahan on Monday last, between 6 and 7 o'clock; he was in a very wild condition; no shoes, or hat, and only pantaloons and a check overfrock; he appeared to have been wet; he said he had been swimming all night; said he had hired a boat to go off to the pile-driving machine and got upset; he did not tell me any one was with him; from his appearance I thought he had been on a drunken frolic the night before, and was then under the influence of liquor; told me he lived in Brooklyn, and had been in this country four or five months; gave him some breakfast, and after setting by the fire awhile he left; he said that he worked on the pile-driver.

Question by Prisoner—Mr. Whitley, did I ask you for permission to stay here until such time as I could write to Brooklyn for money to buy boots and a hat.

Mr. Whitley—Yes, but I refused, because I thought you was able to walk it.

A recess was here taken until 2 o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Jury assembled again shortly after 2 P. M., when the following additional evidence was taken:

Patrick Gilmore testified: I reside at No. 27 Furman-street, Brooklyn, and am a dock-builder; have known Monahan 8 or 9 years in Canada and here; Monahan came to Brooklyn last Fall; saw him last on Monday about noon; was employed on the same pile-driver with him; I took $7 90 from his pocket on Sunday week, and gave it to him when he came ashore again to Jersey City; Monahan was drunk when I took the money from his pocket; I put him to bed when he came on board; we tied his hands and feet; he lay asleep about three hours; when he woke up he asked for something to eat, and being refused, said he would go ashore and get something; I gave the money back, and he left at nearly dark; Monahan brought a bottle of liquor on board and the foreman threw it overboard; next saw Monahan in Brooklyn, and he told me about the boat upsetting, and he thought the other young fellow was drowned; the brother of deceased was over to Brooklyn on Tuesday, and I told him where Monahan lived; Monahan was coming over to Jersey City that afternoon, and I advised him not to, that they knew where to find him if they wanted him; the prisoner brought the bottle of liquor on board for me, and the foreman took it from my hand and threw it overboard.

The evidence of John Murphy and Alfred Wilcox, also employed on the pile-driver was taken, but nothing additional to the above was elicited.

James Snelgrove, testified—I keep a boat-house at the foot of Essex-street; have known Conroy (deceased) seven or eight years; he was not in my employ; he was considered a smart boatman; never knew him to have an accident in a row-boat; have known accidents to boats by catching a mis-stroke; it was against the rules for two men to go in one of those boats; it only weighed about 100 pounds and might be easily upset by two men in her; saw Conroy about three o'clock on that Sunday afternoon; he was asleep at the end of the dock; Monahan and the other three pile-drivers were in the bar dancing, &c.; they were all very much intoxicated; saw Monahan again between seven and eight o'clock in the evening at the boat-house, and he was so much intoxicated that he reeled from one side of the dock to the other; he remained at the boat-house fifteen or twenty minutes; think he took one drink; he offered sixty cents for some one to take him over, and said it was all the money he had; heard Conroy's brother tell him that he ought to know better than to take that boat; the boat is fourteen inches deep; a man could turn her over in the water; several accidents have occurred to Conroy within three months; he had a fall and cut his head two or three months ago; he had a fight two weeks ago and received a small cut on the temple from a kick.

Detective McWilliams testified as to having arrested Monahan in Brooklyn. The prisoner stated to him that he (Monahan) intended to come over to Jersey City and give himself up, but one of his friends advised him not to go over, for there was a hard crowd over there and they might injure him.

The case was given to the jury at 5 P. M., and upon a vote being taken, six were for bringing in a verdict against Monahan and six for acquitting him of all blame. At 8 o'clock the jury stood five against Monahan and seven for acquittal, and as there was no probability that they would agree, Coroner Kirsten decided to discharge them and lay the evidence before the Grand Jury (which will commence its sitting to-day) for their action. Monahan was accordingly committed to the County Jail to await the result.

The names of the jury are, E. C. Hopper, foreman, George T. White, Francis Moles, Charles Paret, Hiram P. Ballard, James H. Love, —— Monahan, Thomas Brophy, George Dellaway, Jeffrey Collins, John Bond and Jacob Curtis.

THE AVENUE A TRAGEDY.

Conclusion of the Inquest by Coroner Gover—Additional Evidence—Verdict of the Jury.

The dreadful calamity which occurred on the night of the 23d ult., in a tenement-house on the corner of Avenue A and Thirteenth-street, when an entire family of five persons was suffocated while endeavoring to escape from the flames raging on the lower floors, is no doubt fresh in the minds of our readers. The inquest, adjourned for a week to allow more time for investigation, was yesterday resumed by Coroner Gover, at the Seventeenth Precinct Station-house. The following is the additional evidence adduced:

STATEMENT OF JAMES M. M'GREGOR.

James M. McGregor, being duly sworn, deposed: I am Superintendent of Buildings for the City and County of New-York; I have made an examination of the building corner of Avenue A and Thirteenth-street, that was on fire on the morning of Sept. 23, 1866, and found the building constructed according to the requirements of the law; Mr. Charles K. Hyde, one of our Inspectors, reported that the whole of that row of houses had scuttle ladders when he examined them last Spring; of course, when I examined the building I did not see any, as it may have been burned; I think those buildings are safe in case of fire, as the whole block have roofs even with each other; I had the fire law amended last Winter to this effect: That all stationary scuttle ladders might be made of wood, but that all movable ones are to be made of iron; this amendment became necessary on account of tenants breaking up movable ladders for fuel; I am of opinion that, had the Rottigier family succeeded in reaching the roof, they would have been safe, but I think they were overcome by the smoke before they reached the scuttle ladder; I think all stairways in tenement houses, either inside or outside, might be of iron or stove, and that the hall partition walls ought to be fire-proof, and any building built to contain more than six families ought to be fireproof throughout; I also suggest that an ordinance be passed compelling owners of tenement-houses to place signs in the hallways directing tenants how to use fire-escapes in case of danger; very few instances now exist where proper means for escape by the roof have not been provided, and such will be the case as soon as we shall have compelled delinquents to act, which we are doing with all possible celerity; the St. Johns-street disaster last Summer would not have resulted so fatally had the inmates attempted to escape by the roof; the law, recently amended, directs that all dwelling houses more than forty feet high, and intended for more than six families, shall have a stairway, connected with a proper scuttle or other opening, leading to the roof, and all the rooms on each floor shall connect by doors from front to rear, and every such dwelling shall have placed thereon a practical fire-proof fire escape; in cases where two or more buildings adjoining shall have flat roofs of equal height they shall be exempt from the requirement of placing such fire-escapes therein.

STATEMENT OF THOMAS DALY.

Thomas Daly, being sworn, deposed: I am clerk for Mr. O'Brien, who keeps the store under the house which was burned on the 23d ult.; I have been there six years; this house has been on fire twice during that time, and during the July riots in 1863, an attempt was made to set it on fire, but it was not successful; I have heard persons residing in that neighborhood threaten to burn out Mr. O'Brien, but I cannot identify any of them; I have not heard any threats lately, and do not know what cause they had for such threats; on the night of the fire I closed up the store at 11 o'clock, and left soon after; as I was putting up the shutters a stranger came by, slightly intoxicated, and inquired for an oyster saloon, and I directed him to two or three, but he refused to go to any of them; the only reason why threats should be made is a difference of religion, but I never knew O'Brien to give any cause for offence; I have not been to the top of the house for some time, but I saw a good scuttle ladder there the last time I was up stairs; I never heard any complaint against the scuttle, or that it was locked; Mr. O'Brien had about $6,000 worth of stock, and was insured for $3,000; I never heard of his wishing to sell his store; just before leaving the store I went into the yard and noticed that the back steps were wet; I told the young man in the store that I thought some one had been committing a nuisance there; I did not smell any peculiar odor; there was one barrel of oil and an empty barrel in the yard; I had the key of the store on Saturday night, and there is only one key to the store; I was at home and asleep when the fire broke out; my wife woke me, and I got up and went to the fire; the Rottegiers had lived in the house about a year; no goods were taken from the store previous to the fire.

STATEMENT OF HENRY BRIEN.

I reside at No. 29 East Eleventh-street; I kept the grocery-store at the corner of Avenue A and Thirteenth-street, where the fire took place; I have kept that store for eleven years; since I have been there the store was burned once, and there was also an attempt made to destroy it during the July riots of 1863; I left the store on Saturday night at about half-past ten o'clock, my usual hour for going home; Thomas Daly and Cornelius Graham, my clerks, were in the store when I left; I got home at about a quarter before twelve; I think it was half-past one o'clock when a young man (Thomas O'Hara) called me up and informed me of the fire; he said the upper part of the house was on fire; I went right down to the store, and when I reached there the premises were nearly burned out; I never heard any one make any threats against me, and did not expect anything of the kind; I believe the fire to have been of incendiary origin, but have no cause to suspect any one in particular; there is a very hard set of young men who infest that neighborhood, and I suppose the fire was kindled by some of them for the purpose of stealing; the scuttle leading to the roof never was locked; there never was a lock on it, and I do not think there was even a hasp and hook on it; it could have been raised very easily; I am not aware of any enmity existing in the neighborhood against me; I have been doing a good business at the store, and have never had any difficulty with my customers; I have never had any serious difficulty with any one in my life; I did not remove any goods from the store during the Saturday previous to the fire; I have an interest in two other grocery stores; my stock was insured for $3,000; there were over $5,600 worth of goods in the store at the time of the fire; I never had any desire to sell out, nor did I ever offer to sell to any one; I was satisfied with the business I was doing there.

STATEMENT OF WM. TUCKER.

I reside at No. 238 East Fourteenth-street; on the night of the fire I returned home at about 12:30 or 12:40 o'clock; I partially undressed myself, and went down to the privy in the rear yard, and while I was there a young man jumped over the fence, and attempted to get into the privy where I was; he then passed through the entry of the house where I live, and I followed him closely; when I got into the entry the man had disappeared; I then called the man next door, and he procuring a light, we looked all round, but could not see anybody; I then went upstairs, and got in bed; I had been in bed about fifteen minutes when the alarm of fire was given; I came down, and got on the shed in front of the burning building; I climbed up to the second story window by means of the shutters, and assisted in rescuing two boys and a woman from the second story of the house; the man who jumped over the fence came from the direction of Thirteenth-street; there were but two or three fences from the rear of Mr. Brien's place; I did not see the man's face and could not identify him; I have never heard any threats made against Mr. Brien.

At the conclusion of the above testimony the case was submitted to the Jury, who after a short deliberation returned the following

VERDICT:

"We find that Cornelius Rottegier and his wife and three children came to their deaths by suffocation and burns, during the fire at the house corner of Avenue A and Thirteenth-street, on the 23d day of September, 1866, and from the evidence we believe said fire originated by an incendiary act, at the hands of some person or persons unknown, and that great praise is due Capt. John J. Mount for his persistent efforts in endeavoring to discover the perpetrator of so terrible a crime."

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The Opening Last Evening—Large Attendance of Pupils—Inauguration of the Evening High School—Brilliant Assemblage of Young Men.

Last evening the Evening Schools of the city entered upon their usual course of Winter instruction. As has already been announced in the Times, the registering of names of pupils has been going on every evening for the past week, and although greater discrimination has been exercised this season in the admission of pupils than ever before, the number registered exceeds that of any previous opening night. There were in attendance last evening about 7,500 scholars, but when the cold weather sets in this number will be more than doubled. The number of schools has been somewhat reduced this year, but increased facilities for instruction have been accorded those which are continued. It is rather a concentration than a reduction of educational facilities. Should the attendance justify such a course, other schools will at once be opened, and a full corps of teachers supplied. Among the attendants at one of the schools last evening, we observed an adult Chinaman, who eagerly listened to all that was said, and seemed as anxious to receive instruction as any one present.

A new feature in the Evening Schools was inaugurated last evening under the most favorable auspices. The Board of Education has long been considering the feasibility of opening a free school which should be to our evening schools what the Free Academy has been to our day schools—a seminary where a complete education should be given to whoever sought it. A committee from the Board submitted a plan for an Evening High School, which was immediately adopted, and last evening the school was formally opened in Grammar School Building No. 35. The large hall was crowded to overflowing with young gentlemen, every seat being occupied, and many standing around against the wall. A more brilliant assemblage of young men has not been seen in a long time. Several members of the Board of Education occupied the platform, Mr. John F. Turner, Chairman of the Committee on the Reorganization of Evening Schools, occupying the Chair. Mr. Randall, Superintendent of Public Schools, and two of his assistants, were also present. Mr. Randall made a brief speech, complimenting the Board of Education upon the good work it had accomplished, and the young men upon having such an opportunity for acquiring an education. Mr. Richard Warren, one of the School Commissioners, also made a speech, repeating what was intended to be accomplished by this school. He said that the Board of Education did not intend that hereafter any man in the City should be able to say that he had not facilities afforded him for acquiring an education. It was intended at this High School to teach to one and all such branches as they should deem of the most practical use to them. It was not designed to keep young men poring over Latin and Greek, but whenever a few of them got together, forming a class, and said we want to study this or that, a teacher would be sent to them capable of imparting to them a knowledge of what they desired, be it Chinese or Choctaw. The speaker paid a deserved compliment to the Principal of the school, Mr. Thomas Hunter, saying that he had no equal as an instructor of youth in this State, and that he had been one of the most trusted and most successful Principals in the employ of the Board for many years. Other congratulatory speeches were made, after which the registry of names of pupils commenced. From the enthusiasm manifested last evening, it is evident that one Evening High School will not accommodate all who desire to avail themselves of the advantages offered, and the Board will doubtless soon be called upon to open another. It would afford the Board great pleasure to do this, for all its members are in favor of offering every facility to those young men who are anxious to increase their store of knowledge. The books of registry will be open every evening this week, and on Monday evening next the regular course of instruction will commence.

The following is the list of teachers selected for the present school:

Thomas Hunter, Principal.

James E. Morrison, History and Political Science.

Hugh Williamson, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, and Astronomy.

William M. Baker, Geometry, Algebra, and Trigonometry.

Edward E. Burney, Grammar, Reading and Declamation.

J. S. Babcock, Penmanship, Bookkeeping and Arithmetic.

Francis Melville, Architecture, Drawing, etc.

MURDER.

A Well-known Trotting Trainer Killed on Centreville Course, L. I.

Yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, Mr. Robert Walker, the well-known trotting trainer and driver, who keeps the hotel immediately adjoining the Centreville Course, L. I., proceeded to that track to exercise one of the horses he was training. Shortly afterwards his family were alarmed at seeing the horse and sulky gallop back to the stable without a driver, and on proceeding to the Course, only a couple of hundred yards distant, they were horrified to discover his dead body laid on the track, with a pistol or rifle-ball through his brains. No person was seen on the course or in the neighborhood, and the perpetrator and the motive which led to such a catastrophe cannot be surmised. Mr. Walker removed from Newark to Centreville about three years ago, and by his steady, industrious and straightforward honorable conduct, had gained the respect and esteem of every one, and especially of the patrons of the trotting turf, who admired him for his incorruptible principles of character.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The Law Providing for the Election of Five Councilmen in Each Senatorial District Pronounced Unconstitutional.

A meeting of this Board was held at 2 P. M. yesterday, Mr. Brice in the chair.

At a recent meeting of the Board a resolution was adopted requesting the Corporation Counsel to give his opinion as to whether section 12, chapter 876 of the Laws of 1866 is constitutional, said section referring to the election of five Councilmen in each Senatorial District, and the subject of said section not being mentioned in the title of the bill. In answer to this resolution the Corporation Counsel says that the section is void and of no effect.

The communication was ordered to be printed, and the Board adjourned to Monday next, at 2 P. M.

Medical Society of the County of New-York.

The sixty-first annual meeting of the Medical Society of the County of New-York, was held at the College of Physicians and Surgeons last evening, the President, Dr. T. C. Finnell, in the Chair. The Treasurer, Dr. Bibbins, presented the annual report, which set forth that at the beginning of the year there was a balance in the treasury amounting to $55 57, and the receipts for the year amounted to $433 38. The expenditure amounted to $332 29.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Dr. S. T. Hubbard.

Vice-President—Dr. Kennedy.

Treasurer—Dr. Bebbins.

Recording Secretary—Dr. Elliott.

Corresponding Secretary—Dr. Brush.

Censors—Drs. Finnell, Chamberlain, Underhill, Blakeman and Thompson.

Delegates to the State Medical Society—Drs. Budd, Smith, Kennedy, Hubbard, Chamberlain, Elliott, Peaslee, Bibbins, Thomson, Garrish, Underhill, J. C. Smith, Pruice, Bahan, Conolly, Field, Pond, Barry, Newman, Vankleek, Thoms.

Several amendments were made to the by-laws, in order to conform them to an act passed by the State Legislature at its last session.

The Society then adjourned to the 12th of November.

Serious Fire Up Town—Aggregate Loss About $20,000.

At midnight of yesterday a fire broke out in the extensive scale factory of Richard Brown, situate near the corner of Fifty-seventh-street and Third-avenue, which resulted in heavy loss. Owing to the great distance up town, the firemen could not reach the scene of the conflagration in time to be of any material service, and the stock and premises were damaged by fire and water to the extent of nearly $20,000, the police estimating the loss at over $25,000. This loss is covered by insurances of $3,400 in each of the following companies: Croton, New-York and Yonkers, Broadway, Security and two otehr companies. The origin of the fire is as yet unknown. Investigations will be made by the Fire Marshal.

Sabbath School Concert.—The Sabbath school attached to the Willet-street Methodist Episcopal Church gave a concert last evening, in the main audience-room of their building. The principal feature in the programme was the beautiful singing by Philip Phillips, Esq., whose selections of pieces from his book—The Singing Pilgrim—were received with hearty applause by the vast audience that crowded the place. The proceeds are to be devoted to the interests of the school library.

Fire in Williamsburgh.—Yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, the stable adjoining school-house No. 23, in Conselyea, near Smith-street, E. D., was fired, and the flames spread to the school-house. The former was entirely consumed, while the latter was saved, with a loss of about $300. The children had all left previous to the fire. The Police have no doubt that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

Political Affairs in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Monday, Oct. 1.

The political excitement in this city and State is on the increase, in view of the election to-morrow week. Daniel Dougherty, Esq., delivered an address before a large audience at the Academy of Music this evening, under the auspices of the Union League. A large and enthusiastic meeting of the supporters of the Administration was held to-night in front of Independence Hall, and addressed by Senator Cowan and others.

The Cholera in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Monday, Oct. 1.

One new case of cholera is reported to-day. No alarm whatever is felt in regard to the four cases that have occurred here. The city is in a remarkably cleanly condition, and there is little probability of the disease spreading.

The Prize Ring.

St. Louis, Monday, Oct. 1.

Mike McCool, late prize-fight victor, has declined the challenge of Joe Coburn, of New-York, and also the challenge of Davis, his late competitor, for a second trial. He says he renounces the ring forever.

Sudden Death.

OFFICE OF THE TRUSTEES OF CREDITORS AND STOCKHOLDERS OF THE OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI R. R. CO., (Eastern Division,)
No. 88 Wall-st., NEW-YORK, Sept. 24, 1866.

NOTICE—A SPECIAL MEETING OF THE holders of certificates issued by this Trust will be held at the office of the Trustees, No. 88 Wall-st., New-York, on THURSDAY, the first day of November next, at noon, to adopt a plan for the reorganization of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company.

To act upon this important question, the agreement under which the trust was formed requires that three-fourths in interest of the owners, or their legal representatives, of preferred and also of unpreferred certificates, shall be present and voting. For the purpose, therefore, of insuring a quorum, certificate-holders are earnestly requested to have transfers made in their own names, and to be present at the meeting, either in person or by proxy.

The transfer books of the Trust will be closed on the 16th day of October next, at 2 o'clock P. M., and remain closed until further notice. By order of the Trustees,
ALLAN CAMPBELL, Chairman.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS
OF THE
NATIONAL EXPRESS AND TRANSPORTATION COMPANY AND TO THE PUBLIC.

The authorities of the NATIONAL EXPRESS AND TRANSPORTATION COMPANY deem it proper to state, in this public manner, that they have regarded it their duty to discontinue their operations over many of their lines of transportation, and have taken steps looking to an entire suspension of their business in certain contingencies. The causes which have brought about this result will be explained in full to the general meeting of stockholders, called to be held in the City of Richmond on the 9th proximo. At this time, and in this form, these causes cannot all be enumerated, even if it was deemed judicious to do so. It is proper, however, to say that the business of the Company has increased rapidly and regularly until today it presents an increase and an amount unexampled in the history of any similar enterprise in any country. To have made, and still to make the undertaking as brilliantly successful as its most sanguine friends, in its inception, predicted, it was, and is still, only necessary for the Stockholders to pay promptly the requisitions which have been made upon them. While many have done this, many, either from inability or unwillingness to invest further, have failed so to do, and their representatives have consequently been powerless to carry the Company at once to a secure and lasting success. Errors of management have, no doubt, been committed; but in what business, of the magnitude of this, have not similar errors, and even greater mistakes, been made? The whole country has been witness to the warfare which has, from the beginning, been waged upon this Company, and the means and appliances which have been brought into requisition to bring about its destruction. A manly and fair minded public will long remember these things. In spite, however, of all this, the Company have this day an established business and good will and reputation, for which any similar Company would be glad to pay the amount of money already expended by this Company. It is for the Stockholders now to say whether they will carry on the operations of the Company, by promptly paying up what may be necessary to that end, and thus profit by what has already been achieved; or, whether they will consent, by abandoning it, to lose what they have already invested. A meeting has been called to assemble in Richmond on the 9th of October, at which it is earnestly hoped that every Stockholder will be present, either in person or by proxy, so that there may be a full expression of opinion as to what shall be the future of our enterprise, especially as, in failure of the Stockholders to act, it may be necessary to call upon them for additional contributions to make up deficiencies toward the payment of debts, after the sale of the property of the Company. The Directory think it just to all parties to assure those interested that the property of the Company, with the unpaid requisitions on the delinquent stock, will be amply sufficient to meet all of the liabilities of the Company.

By order of the Board of Directors,
J. V. H. ALLEN,
Secretary and Treasurer.

$20 A DAY TO AGENTS.
THE FASTEST SELLING
AND BEST MAP EVER ISSUED.
LLOYD'S GREAT MAP OF NORTH AMERICA AND SOUTH AMERICA;

OR, THE UNITED STATES CONTINENT IN 1900. 24 square feet, engraved on steel, mounted and varnished, with rollers, and colored in forty States and Territories, cost $100,000 and four years' labor, finished to-day; worth $20, yet retails for $2 50; shows 3,000,000 places, 5,000 railways, and 60,800 railway-stations, 800,000 towns, villages, post-offices, cities, gold and silver mines, 20,000 stations on the Overland, Dispatch, Mail, Telegraph, and Emigrant routes across the Plains and Rocky Mountains. The Atlantic Telegraph Cable and the whole Continent is shown, from the spot in the Arctic Ocean where Sir John Franklin perished, westward through Behring Strait, to the Pacific, and southward 25,000 miles, around Cape Horn, to Greenland—water entirely surrounding this mighty continent, all seen and comprehended at a single glance. By the study of such a map is geography only learned. This is the first map ever made which shows the correct course of the Missouri, Yellowstone, and Columbia Rivers, and their hundreds of tributaries. I refer to the War Department, or the American Fur Company, St. Louis. This is a map for the world to consult; a map for the Student and Statesman; a map for the crowned heads of Europe to ponder over—showing the greatness of the United States Territory, which has doubled since 1852, and its greatness when its wings shall have expanded over the whole continent, from the North Pole to the South Sea. To insure this map being hung up in every house throughout the civilized world, we have engraved a large separate map of the United States portion of the Continent on a scale eight times as large as the main Map, and colored it in 4,000 distinct counties and printed it on the reverse side, so, by raising the bottom roller, the County Map faces you, showing every minute village, railway-station, and distances between, and county seat. 400,000 names, and 36,000 railroad-stations. Both Maps for $2 50.

County Rights given each Agent.

Send money for a sample, and see the Map first. If not sold, taken back on demand. Agents are averaging 20 copies a day.

Printed instructions how to canvass well furnished our agents. Ladies do as well as men.

MEDICAL.

TO MARRIED AND SINGLE LADIES.
PORTUGUESE FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.—Every lady uses them. In all cases of stoppage or irregularity, from whatever cause, they are certain to succeed in forty-eight hours, and at the same time safe and healthy, as well as pleasant, being sugar-coated. They are scientifically prepared of costly and rare extracts. The only reliable specific for ladies. They cannot fail in any case. Price $3 and $5 a box. Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Midwifery, Sole Agent and Proprietor for upward of twenty years. Office No. 129 Liberty-st., or sent by mail in letter envelope.
Dr. Mauriceau guarantees a safe and immediate removal of all special irregularities in females with or without medicine.

HASTEN TO DR. KENNEDY, NO. 195 Elm-st. He makes the greatest cures known. Thousands are saved by Dr. KENNEDY'S skillful and improved treatment.—Private diseases cured in the shortest possible time by Dr. KENNEDY, No. 195 Elm-st., New-York. Dr. KENNEDY, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain remedies for diseases of a private character. In 28 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and at less expense than any other can or will, and those who have been robbed, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor. Persons at a distance address Dr. G. KENNEDY, 195 Elm-st. Call or write.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE—Containing nearly 300 pages and 150 fine plates and engravings of the anatomy of the sexual organs, in a state of health and disease, with a treatise on self-abuse, its deplorable consequences upon the mind and body, with the author's plan of treatment—the only rational and successful mode of cure, as shown by the report of cases treated. A truthful adviser of the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain doubts of their physical condition. Sent, free of postage, to any address on receipt of 25 cents, in specie or postage stamps. Address Dr. LA CROIX, No. 31 Maiden-lane, Albany, N. Y.

TO MARRIED LADIES.—MADAME RESTELL, Professor of Midwifery over thirty years, guarantees a safe and immediate removal of all obstructions from whatever cause, with or without medicine, at one interview, or by mail. Her INFALLIBLE FRENCH MONTHLY PILLS, No. 1, price $1, or No. 2, price $5, which are four degrees stronger, and can never fail, are safe and healthy. Office No. 64 West 34th-st., near 6th-av. Also sold at Druggist's No. 152 Greenwich-st., or sent by mail. Address Box 2,359, New-York.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION, by Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, strictly intended for those whose health or circumstances forbid a too rapid increase of family. Price $1. Sold at his office No. 129 Liberty-st., New-York; or can be sent by mail, free of postage, to any part of the United States and Canada, by inclosing $1, and addressing Box No. 1,224 New-York City.

MANY THOUSANDS ARE RUINED BEYOND REDEMPTION in this life by not calling on Dr. HUNTER sooner or later. He can cure the worst cases of secret disease in a shorter time than any other physician, or no pay taken. Skeptics and doubters will please call and read hundreds of reliable certificates of cures made within the last thirty years of almost hopeless cases, that had had the benefit of dozens of our most eminent physicians and surgeons. Dr. Hunter is in constant attendance from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, at his old office, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City, since 1834. Charges moderate, and a cure guaranteed. Separate rooms, so that the patient sees no one but the Doctor himself. His wonderful medical discovery, DR. HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures private diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, and possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. $2 per vial. Book, 50 pages, gratis, on nervous debility, causes of impotency, marasmus, &c.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

Funeral of William McKeever.—The funeral of William McKeever, who was mysteriously killed on the 22d of September, while driving the horse Butler on the Chicago racing track, took place at the Church of the Ascension yesterday afternoon. Between three and four hundred mourners were present, and among the relatives were the mother, brother, two sisters and brother-in-law of the deceased. A representation from City Lodge No. 408 of Free and Accepted Masons, numbering about forty members, and also from the Mutual Base Ball Club, with both of which organizations the deceased was connected, attended the funeral. In the church the Episcopal services for the burial of the dead were conducted by Rev. Dr. Dyer, and after they were over the corpse was deposited in the vestibule, where it was viewed before being finally sealed in the coffin. The pall-bearers were George Bradford, Sewall Dodge, Chas. Waldon, Lance Taylor, A. B. Taylor, Geo. Ten Broeck, Andrew Gilmore and P. Castro. The remains of the deceased were interred in Greenwood Cemetery.

Carrara Marbles.—There is no won exhibition at the salesroom of Messrs. Miner & Somerville, No. 37 Nassau-street, a rare collection of statuary in Carrara marble, statuettes in alabaster, and vases and other ornaments of like material and of rare workmanship. Among the works in marble deserving the attention of the connoisseur are two fine busts of Diana and Apollo, Nos. 311 and 312; a fine figure exquisitely modeled, and full of animation, entitled "A Boy with a Bird," No. 290, being an original by Nardini, of Florence, and a bust of Abraham Lincoln, lately exhibited at Goupil's Gallery on an allegorical pedestal finely chiseled, and illustrative of the life and death of the Martyr President. The collection throughout is the finest ever imported here by Messrs. Lanoni & Co., the only caterers to the New-York public in this direction. The vases and statuettes in alabaster merit a careful inspection.

Arrivals in the City.—Hon. John A. Green, Syracuse; Hon. J. P. Goodsell, Oneida; Hon. T. G. Alvord, Salina; Hon. Hiram Sibley, Rochester; Gen. Thomas T. Eckert, Washington; B. G. Bruce, Lexington, and D. N. Burrows, Jackson, Miss., are at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Gov. R. E. Fenton, Albany; Hon. Galusha A. Grow, Pennsylvania; Gen. Granger, United States Army; Hon. G. S. Hastings, Albany; G. P. Este, Washington, and M. Bowen, United States Army, are at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. Gen. Augur, United States Army; Hon. J. H. Ramsey, Albany; Gen. L. C. Turner, Washington; G. E. Thornton, U. S. N., and J. M. Rogers, Washington, are at the Astor House. Judge Joynes, Virginia, is at the Southern Hotel.

Probably Drowned.—The body of Thomas Baldwin was found yesterday morning in a pond at the intersection of Fifty-ninth-street with Fifth-avenue, and it was removed to his late residence, in Sixty-ninth-street, near Eighth-avenue. Coroner Gamble was notified, and will hold an inquest this morning. Deceased had resided in the upper portion of the City for many years; he was a native of New-York, 85 years of age, and bore a good reputation among his neighbors. He was seen at church on Sunday morning and afternoon, as usual, and started from home in the evening for a walk; and it is supposed that, being very feeble, he stumbled into the pond and was drowned.

Election of Town Trustees in Morrisania.—The election for four Trustees for the town of Morrisania, held yesterday, resulted in the election of the following candidates: William Batty in the First Ward, Democrat, over John L. Bennett, regular Democratic nominee, by a majority of 17 votes. Second Ward—Michael J. Bergen, Democrat, over Henry Henning, Citizens' and Tax Payers' candidate, by a majority of 25. Third Ward—Thomas W. Timpson, Democrat, over Rudolf Garrigue, Radical Republican, by a majority of 35 votes. Fourth Ward—Col. James J. Mooney, Democrat, over Dubois B. Fowler, Radical Republican, by 2 majority.

Rescued from Drowning.—Last night, about 7 o'clock, Sergt. Fitzgerald and Officers Doyle and Allen, of the Harbor Police, rescued two soldiers, named Michael Curley and Patrick Donovan, who, while intoxicated, stripped off their clothing and attempted to swim from the Battery to Governor's Island. On the officers approaching them in their boat they would dive under water, giving the officers considerable trouble in saving them. Had they not been seen both would no doubt have been drowned, as the ebb tide was running quite swift out of the East River. They were taken care of for the night by the police.

The Cholera.—The following cholera cases were reported to the Sanitary Superintendent of the Board of Health yesterday: Thomas Anderson, aged 35, died at No. 19 Mulberry-street yesterday; Mary Bealy, aged 32, died at No. 51 Mulberry-street yesterday; A boy named Plantz is ill in Fifty-third street, near Eleventh-avenue; Thos. Nicholson, aged 40, is ill at No. 193 East Seventeenth-street. There are nine patients in the Battery Barracks Hospital.

The number of deaths in this City last week was 481, of which 38 were caused by cholera. The previous week there were 500 deaths, 54 of which were by cholera.

The Bible Union.—The Union meets at 10 o'clock to-morrow to celebrate its seventeenth anniversary. It will be addressed by distinguished scholars. Rev. Drs. King, Eddy, Sheldon, Smith, Burgess, Hodge, Armitage and others are announced, and arrangements are making to entertain a very large delegation from the American States and the Canadas. The business will extend through two full days, and a report will be presented on the progress of the new version of the Bible. The meetings will be open to all clergymen and laymen of all denominations.

Marine News.—The steamer Morris Castle, of the Atlantic and Mississippi Steamship Line, being detained by quarantine regulations at Havana, the steamer North America, Capt. Timmerman, will take her place and sail to-morrow for Havana. A fine new clipper ship, named the Coldstream, built at Mystic, for Sutton & Co.'s Dispatch Line of San Francisco packets, was put on the dry-dock on Saturday to receive her copper. She 162 feet long, and 35 feet in breadth of beam, and is of the most approved model. She can be seen at Pier No. 12 East River.

Pickpockets at Central Park.—Central Park has become of late quite a favorite resort for pickpockets, scarcely a day passing but what some complaints are made to the Police by parties who are sufferers from their depredations. Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Charlotte Murphy was robbed of her pocket-book while enjoying the pleasure of a ramble through the Park. Fortunately for her, she had taken the precaution to leave all of her money at home, except just enough for car fare and incidentals, so that, beside a handsome pocket-book, the thief got very little for his trouble. He was not arrested.

Found Drowned.—About 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon the body of an unknown man was found floating in the East River, near the foot of Thirty-fourth-street. The body was dressed in dark cloths, black necktie, fine boots, and white muslin shirt. Deceased was about 30 years of age, had dark hair, a little bald on the top of the head, and long chin whiskers. In his pockets were found $24 in money, a gold stud, a bunch of keys, and two knives. The body was taken to the Morgue.

Bled to Death.—At 6:30 P. M. yesterday an unknown man was found sitting on the corner of Dover and Front streets by John G. Nelson, of No. 258 Front-street, bleeding profusely from the mouth. He was removed to a drug-store near by, where he died soon after. Deceased was about 30 years of age, had a black mustache and whiskers, and the body was dressed in a black cloth coat with velvet collar, dark pants, gray vest and brown straw hat. The body was taken to the Oak-street Station-house.

Horticultural Exhibition.—The Horticultural Exhibition of the American Institute commenced yesterday at the Cooper Institute, with a fine show of the best pears. It will open to-morrow at 10 P. M., when in addition will be a large show of grapes, which will compete for the $100 prize offered by Mr. Greeley. There is no charge, and lovers of fruit are invited.

Fatal Fall.—At an early hour yesterday morning John Kelly, a laborer, fell from a derrick at the Novelty Iron Works, while at work at the foot of East Twelfth-street. The injuries inflicted by the fall were so great as to cause death in a few minutes. The remains were removed to Kelly's late residence, No. 301 East Eighth-street, and Coroner Gamble was notified to hold an inquest.

Fatal Fall from a Stoop.—Charles Grief, 62 years of age, fell from the stoop of his residence, No. 85 Clinton-street, on Saturday evening, and received severe injuries by his head coming in contact with the flagging, which resulted in death yesterday afternoon. An inquest will be held to-day.

A Leap from a Window.—At a late hour on Sunday night Garrett Murphy jumped from a second story window of his residence, No. 80 Ann-street, while laboring under the influence of liquor, and received several severe injuries. The Second Precinct Police removed Murphy to the New-York Hospital.

The West-Side Association.—A public meeting, under the auspices of the West Side Association, will be held at the Everett Rooms, corner of Broadway and Thirty-fourth-street, on Wednesday evening. "Rapid Transportation of Passengers in New-York" will be the principal subject discussed.

A Veteran Company for the Ninth Regiment.—This company will assemble at the regimental armory, No. 221 West Twenty-sixth-street, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 3, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of electing officers and perfecting the organization of the company.

Serious Illness of the City Chamberlain.—Daniel Devlin, Esq., the City Chamberlain, who was taken suddenly sick on Saturday last, still lies in a most critical condition. Yesterday he was unable to recognize his most intimate friends.

To Travelers.—Messrs. Benedict Brothers, keepers of the City time, have just published, in a compact form, a neat book of railroad and steamboat time tables, which will be found of convenient size and arrangement for travelers.

Poetic Reading.—Mr. T. Buchanan Read, author of "Sheridan's Ride," will read a selection of poems from his own works, at Cooper Institute this evening, for the benefit of the church at Islip.

THE LAST GOOD-BYE.

From Frank Leslie's Chimney Corner.

The day had faded,—night was near!
A moment by the gate so dear
I paused to whisper in her ear
The Last Good-Bye!
Her soft hand lingered on the gate,
Trembling to linger there so late,
Content forever, yet, to wait
My Last Good-Bye!

II.

The moon would be so long! she cried—
(The moon that made my love my bride!)
And still she lingered by my side
So lovingly!
She wept;—O were they tears of fear
Lest she might never find day near?
I whispered—kissing off the tear—
My Last Good-Bye!

III.

Her little hand was laid in mine,—
Thro' tears I saw the dear eyes shine;
What sudden fear could she divine?
My heart beat high!
Good night!—sweet eyes, why have you cried?

* * *

Light sounds fell on my ear, and died
Away in air of eventide—
"Good-Night—Good-Bye!"

IV.

The morrow came;—I neared her door,
Grown dearer some ten hours or more;
What whispered all my path before,
Unceasingly?
Those farewell echoes of her song—
That mingled all my dreams among—
Whose last words trembled on my tongue—
Good Night—Good-Bye

V.

The door I opened—heard no sound?
All silent!—was there death around?
I climbed the stairway at a bound,—
Heard one low cry,—
From a still room a whisper came,—
Young lips in dying breathe my name
E'en as I heard it last!—the same!
"Good Night—Good-Bye!"

VI.

I gazed;—O God! she turned to clay!
One gentle spirit passed away!
Fled to the never-ending day—
Eternity!
So lately mine!—so quickly fled
To the cold chambers of the dead!
Sweet! 'twas the dying life that said
"Good-Night—Good-Bye!"

Oft in the night I meditate;
In death I clasp—alas! too late!
Her hand who bade me at the gate
The Last Good-bye!

OMI.

CHAPTER I.—YOUNG LADIES AND WILD BEASTS.

A handsomely furnished suite of bachelor chambers in town; a dashing, fine-looking man, such as ladies like to look upon and attract to themselves; a blotting-book, pens, ink and paper, and a half-finished letter which this very handsome man was inditing.

This is the picture which we must behold in our mind's eye, and upon the sheet of paper these lines, in a fine, manly hand, little indicative of indecision of character.

"You urge me to marry. Now, it seems to me a curious problem, and worthy of deep study, why a man, the moment he marries, exercises all his ingenuity to draw others into the same net. Is it from a feeling of envy of our liberty?—like the unnatural conduct of the trained elephant of India, which gives all its strength and intelligence to entrap its late companions?

"I don't like the idea of matrimony. Leave me to try and discover charms in it with time, which works wonders. It now seems to me a system of bear and forbear—a war offensive and defensive, quite as incomprehensive to the uninitiated as squabblings in the Commons, where gentlemen say the most disagreeable things to one another, laugh at them and shake hands a minute after; talk of a fellow member as 'my honorable friend,' and treat him as if he were a bitter enemy. Matrimony is like martyrdom, I take it—fearful to endure, and only a crown of glory when we are delivered from it."

Yet, even while the inditer penned these lines, his lip curled in smiling satire. As he wrote, imagination conjured up before him, seated in a now vacant chair, a fair form and a lovely, proud, girlish face smiling defiantly upon him in mockery and triumph.

The skeptic in matrimonial bliss raised his head, laid down the pen and gazed into space. Did he see there the one face haunting his memory? A man does not relish being laughed at by his friends for conduct directly opposed to professed opinions; and possibly it was some dread of this sort which prompted Cyrus Gage deliberately to tear up the half-written page into atoms and fling it into the grate, fireless that warm May day.

"Pshaw!" he said aloud, rising from his chair, "where's the use of arguing a point with a man in his honeymoon?" and he began whistling an operatic air, not for want of thought, but to try and banish some intrusive one. We will leave him awhile struggling against his mental foe to peace—bachelor peace; and, quietly going down to one of the prettiest spots near Bushy Park, look upon a totally different scene—one supposed to be of perfect calm and exemption from life's cares beyond those of childhood and girlhood—a ladies' school, of high-class repute. The Misses Lattimer, of Langley House, were deservedly noted for their care of young ladies committed to their charge, both for a well-directed style of education and conscientious attention to their pupils, many of whom were beyond childhood—young, hopeful girls, conscious of their beauty, dreaming of future conquests and power.

Among these was one whose face at once drew attention, even amidst a bevy of youth and beauty, not from its extreme loveliness, but from an unusual expression, even in one so young, of thoughtlessness and wilfulness, as if she were ever watching for some event to surprise or amuse her. The face, with its mischievous expression, was very charming, roseate, but not rosy; dark, loving eyes; a forehead of alabaster whiteness, from which the rich, brown hair, possessing the perfect coloring of the chestnut, was completely combed back.

A very few words will introduce the story up to our opening chapter.

This fair girl was named Omi Devereux. From her very birth she had been followed by a mistake, and, like a spell cast upon her in baptism, her after life exhibited much of the same disorder of things.

Naomi had been the name given her by her godmother, but the curate who baptized her was deaf, and his ear failed to catch the first syllable. It was not of much consequence, perhaps, only parents who have pleased their fancy in a name do not like to have it curiously abridged in the register. "She looks so gentle," said Mrs. Devereux, gazing lovingly into the roll of flannel petticoats on her knee, "that we will call her Naomi. Could the mistake in her name have reversed the child's character? Gentle she certainly was not; but she was laughter-loving and joyous to a fault.

She was reduced by a deaf curate to the unheard of, uncharacteristic name of Omi.

A brother Charles had preceded her into this world by three years, and when the boy was gaining laurels at Harrow, prior to going to Cambridge, his father died down in Yorkshire, at Merelands, some twelve miles from Leeds, and Mrs. Devereux found herself a widow, with a good jointure, sole executrix and guardian to a high-spirited boy of fifteen and a wild girl of twelve.

Mrs. Devereux felt her loneliness much, and her first step was to recall her son from Harrow, and give him a private tutor—a M. A. of Cambridge—with the highest testimonials, a Roman nose, which some ladies much admire, and a soft, persuasive manner, which for widows recently bereaved possesses a great charm.

There could not have been a better youth than Charles Devereux, or one more manly, generous and affectionate; nevertheless, Mr. Drayton, in a very short space of time, gently insinuated to his mother how very fortunate a thing it was for her that she had secured his aid in rightly training her son. With Charles, his tutor was a favorite; for it was no part of the man's scheme to make an enemy of the boy.

Omi had a governess, but Mr. Dayton thought that a little masculine instruction might be beneficial for the young lady, and though Mrs. Devereux at first deemed it unnecessary, she was, at length, induced to coincide in the tutor's views, and Omi entered into many of her brother's studies.

It must not be thought that philanthropy urged the good man to give himself extra trouble for a child's benefit. No; the truth was, Omi was thirteen, and between that age and a marriageable one there is not more than a span's length. Omi was heiress to a large fortune, which a judicious father, though a loving husband, had deemed it prudent to settle upon the child, subject only to a mother's control up to her majority. He was a sensible man and just thought it possible a widow might be disinclined to die without essaying matrimony a second time.

Mr. Drayton was now thirty, and when a man of nearly four-and-thirty, might hope to be a suitable match for a girl of sixteen or seventeen; consequently, his skill in teaching was much called into play to prepossess the fair Omi in his favor, though she evidently disliked him, and worse, ridiculed him, taking no pains to conceal her feelings. But Mr. Drayton was well read enough to know that extremes, like love and heat, often meet; and when he resigned a good position as master in a public school to become Mrs. Devereux's son's tutor, on the plea of health too delicate for the other occupation; the large salary offered him, and propinquity to an heiress, seemed an eligible investment of his personal gifts and graces.

He was what might be termed a "pink man"—not in fox-hunting phraseology, but in delicacy of coloring.

The tutor's ideas had never risen above the possibility of such an event as a marriage with Omi looming in the future, for his benefit.

All have heard of Roman matrons' self-sacrifice, and many tales of the sort; and as Mrs. Devereux was unwilling to be distanced by heroines of history, like a feminine Curtius, she resolved upon a prodigious leap—not to save her country, but her daughter, for whom she perceived Mr. Drayton evinced more than a master's attention; so she married him herself, just eighteen months after her husband's decease. It might have seemed easier to some to have sent the tutor away, but women often delight in extreme measures, so she married him.

We emphasize it thus, because it was literally true. Absorbed in his own schemes, Mr. Drayton did not for a length of time comprehend what was expected of him. When he did, it took him a whole sleepless night to balance the pros and cons between the possible rejection of him by a girl of sixteen, three years hence, and his positive acceptance by a buxom widow of thirty-five, possessing a handsome jointure, and the handling, up to their majority, of her children's fortunes.

We have said it: eighteen months after her husband's death, Mrs. Devereux married Mr. Drayton, giving as an excuse to all whom it might or might not concern that she sacrificed herself solely to save her children and give her son a master whom he must by right obey.

One would have thought, to hear her apology and sigh when uttering it, that a worse boy had never existed than her son Charles, or a more refractory girl than Omi.

Once master of Merelands, the tutor became in all things changed. One sole aim he had in view—to separate the mother from her children. Indeed, her mother wished to send Omi away for a while; somehow, she did not like the dark, loving, but questioning eye of her daughter raised to hers. So Omi was sent to Miss Lattimer's, where she had been four years when our tale commences, spending, however, her holidays at home, whence she returned saddened by each visit; for she saw her mother was unhappy, and all changed in the old place; every familiar face of childhood gone—all her father's old servants departed. Between the brother and sister existed that love which should form the bond of union in a household—sincere affection. Charles thought of Omi's interests long before he ever considered his own; and both, with but one mind between them, consulted how best to secure their mother's happiness, jeopardized in the hands of Mr. Drayton.

No longer did that gentleman speak in low, honeyed phrases; he was domineering, tyrannical, and, worse than all for a woman of refinement to contend against, no gentleman at heart. Mean, money-loving and grasping, his aim was to save up wealth for a day when he might be no longer master of Mrs. Devereux and Merelands.

Charles had entered college at Cambridge; but his vacations, to Mr. Drayton's extreme annoyance, were scrupulously passed at home.

At first he had felt indignant with his mother for her marriage; but when he saw the suffering depicted in her face, he forgot all but the duty incumbent upon him, to protect her as much as he could.

Drayton cordially hated him, for before Charles he was forced to subdue many of his baser inclinations.

A pact had been made between the brother and sister that, should he have any private communication to make, he would find a safe messenger to convey it secretly to her, as all letters, except with her mother's seal upon them, were opened by Miss Lattimer, who boasted that, thanks to her system of instilling good moral principles into her pupils, and her unceasing vigilance, all the years she had kept Langley House not a breath of scandal had fallen on a single inmate. Two governesses walked in front of the long string of young ladies when taking out-door exercise, like discreet pioneers, armed with umbrellas Winter and Summer, and the Misses Lattimer brought up the rear, each like the fabled Argus—all eyes.

Omi was ever on the alert, expecting some secret communication from her brother, as she knew he was at Merelands, and his object in being there was to discover and frustrate some scheme of Mr. Drayton's not very clear to Charles, but evidently regarding the settlement of property, as the lawyer, a low, cunning fellow, worthy of himself, was with Drayton.

It was the month of May, the latter end of that month of promise for the coming Summer—promise of flowers and fruit, the perfection of the bud and blossom: the month of May, when even the aged forget their years; and the Misses Lattimer, roused from the every-day routine of sombre existence, proclaimed an intention of taking a select few of their young ladies to the Zoological Gardens, where they might practically learn a lesson in natural history: the latter end of that month of May, at the commencement of which we have seen Cyrus Gage inditing and then destroying a letter reprehensive of matrimony.

CHAPTER II.—A YOUNG TIGER, AND WHAT IT ACCOMPLISHED.

About a dozen were to go, among them Omi Devereux; but the enjoyment she would otherwise have anticipated was too much qualified by the fact that her confidential friend in the school, her second self, Adela Letchington, had been suddenly called away the previous day by the serious illness of her mother.

Adela was three years older than Omi—that is, twenty years of age—and what so natural as that she should be more advanced than Omi, and have a lover? Yes, she possessed that source for well torturing her heart; for was it not dreadful to be shut up in a ladies' school, and so strict a one as the Misses Lattimer's, and know that her lover was anxiously keeping, so to say, watch and ward in the road? By stealth she sometimes saw him, but seldom found an opportunity even to say, "How d'ye do?" She had met him at her mother's, and nothing was wanting to complete the romance of love, for her parent forbade their loves. Still—and of this fact Omi was confidentially made acquainted—they contrived to correspond. Omi, too, had seen his photograph, and thought Adela's lover very handsome—so he was.

Precisely at eleven the gates of Langley House opened, and a bevy of joyous, laughing girls walked out, escorted by Miss Lattimer and a governess. They had a brisk walk to take of half an hour to the railway station.

As Omi stepped into the road, she perceived a youth with rather a jaunty air, and the cut of that almost obsolete biped, a "tiger" in mufti, who was whistling and looking over the hedge opposite, as if an ardent admirer of Nature. Not less appreciative did he appear of the attractions of young ladies, for he turned round, and, with a mature audacity far beyond his years, stared at Miss Lattimer's boarders, scanning them, as it seemed, with the eye of a connoisseur, until at length his gaze rested upon Omi, as if perfectly satisfied.

Miss Lattimer and the governess were too much intent upon the bustle of arranging their little flock two and two to notice anything else; and what could there be to cause them a moment's uneasiness in the appearance of a boy, who, from looking over the hedge, directed his gaze toward their pupils? Not once did this youth disturb the contentment which pervaded Miss Lattimer's mind when she found herself and the young ladies safely off from Kingston.

And yet there was a fate dogging one of her charges that day, for the tiger in mufti was in a second-class carriage, immediately behind the first-class one in which she and some of the young ladies sat.

The governess was in another, with the remainder of her flock.

At Waterloo terminus, of course, there was much bustle and confusion in getting out; Miss Lattimer and the assistant sbirri (feminine) being as busy and fussy as some women are on any unusual occasion, and eventually bestowing themselves in different cabs.

As she stepped from the railway carriage, Omi's wondering eyes again encountered those of the smart boy, and, significantly, his met hers. She thought of her brother.

There could be no doubt this must be his messenger, and something must be wrong at home; and so anxious and troubled did she feel regarding the two beloved ones there, that all her anticipated pleasure was over for that day. She saw the youth gliding nearer. She was standing behind those who were being hustled and thrust into cabs, when a gentle pull at her mantle made her turn her head.

"Do you expect a letter, Miss?" whispered a small voice from the crowd about them.

"Yes, I do," fell from her agitated lips.

"Fust letter of his Christian name, Miss—C?"

"Yes——."

"Now, my love," said Miss Lattimer, bustling round toward Omi, "we must get into another cab with Miss Cray."

The boy had quickly turned aside, and Omi felt hot and disappointed; but just as the cab door was opened, and she was propelled forward by Miss Lattimer's hand on her arm, on her other side a voice whispered:

"Here he is; hold 'im fast."

But for the presence of the paper which she felt crushed into her hand, she would have been terribly puzzled, if not alarmed, about the masculine entity she was besought to "hold fast."

Could there exist a more agitating position than Omi's, holding a missive, perhaps of life and death, and yet being totally unable even to glance at it?

How long and dreary appeared the journey through the crowded streets, which at another time would have afforded her so much amusement!

Everything must have an end somehow, and at last the tedious drive was over, and Omi and her companions alighted at the Zoological Gardens.

While the others were gazing enraptured at the elephants, Omi managed to open the letter, and covering it with her handkerchief, little by little deciphered the contents, which threw her into a state of greater perplexity than ever. Thus it ran:

"Wednesday.

My Dearest: Should your giddy little fingers drop this document anywhere, I defy the whole army of governesses to make out the sender or receiver. I must see you to-morrow night. I am in town and dispatch this by the cleverest boy in the world, who will not return till he gives it into your hand. By the way, he does not know your name, or who you are. Joe has left me——"

"Who on earth is Joe?" asked Omi of herself, and then read on:

"I gave the boy a password—the first letter of my name. I have arranged everything, for I must see you at once. At half-past eleven, when the house is still, put on your largest, darkest cloak, double your thickest veil over your face, for it is advisable for many reasons that no one should know you; even the servant who is well paid to open the door for you and await your return does not know who you are. Well, then, thus equipped, creep down the back stairs; a servant will be at the bottom to let you out, then leave all to me. I will, if possible, be outside: if not, the bearer of this will conduct you to your ever loving C."

No words could convey an idea of Omi's perplexity and amazement. All these directions were like hidden rocks to a mariner, upon which no light-house had been erected.

The whole day was a maze of fears and conjectures. Not for a moment did she hesitate. She knew her brother would never lead her into such a labyrinth without an absolute necessity, something terrible calling for it. Still, there was a strange tone in the letter—an ambiguity, a lightness of diction—unlike what she would have imagined in her brother's style under urgent cause. Much Miss Lattimer and her companions wondered at the strangeness of her manner; she who generally entered so warmly into amusement of every sort now being absent-minded and evidently troubled.

The weary day was over at last, and Omi laid her head upon her pillow, but not to sleep. A night of combination and anticipation followed, twice as agitating as the actual activity of putting the scheme into practice. Another terrible day, and then came night and bed-time.

To a girl who had never stirred out alone, and scarcely once after nightfall, the act of leaving home at such an hour was appalling; but as the moment approached, worn out with thinking, a reaction took place, and Omi wondered at her own want of appreciation of the adventure before her. She would make Charles laugh at all her terrors. And from that moment the whole affair wore a different aspect in her eyes.

A fond, if weak, mother had put a thick veil—a defense against fogs and damp—among her wardrobe. This was now brought forth; and with a dark, sea-side cloak wrapped around her, the hood drawn closely about her head, as half-past eleven chimed Omi opened her door gently.

Shading the light she held in her hand, she peeped out. Looking up and down the passage, and seeing nothing to alarm her, she extinguished her candle and stole forth.

Not a sound was borne on the night air, save the almost imperceptible echo of her own footfall, as she felt her way down the well-known passage. The door leading down the back stair was open; nothing impeded her project, and at the foot of the stairs stood a female figure.

For the first time that night Omi's courage almost failed her. Up to this point Charles had seemed to stand beside her, her natural protector, pointing to her mother. Now, for the first moment, she felt a mystery—a strange, incomprehensible something around her.

She trembled when she saw a woman's figure, which a light placed at a distance dimly showed her, with an apron so completely covering her head that it was impossible to recognize her.

Without a word she quietly unfastened the door, and then whispered:

"Tap gently, miss, when you return."

And Omi found herself alone in the dark road.

But for the thought that something terrible had occurred at home, which she might assist in alleviating, Omi would then and there have re-entered the house; but the two sacred names of mother and brother lured her on, and a little love of adventure. A moment she leaned, half overcome, against the wall, when she was aroused by a young voice in the obscurity, which said:

"Please, miss, the gen'leman has sent me to bring you to him, as he be kept a-waitin' below."

Where that below was, Omi had not the least conception; but even the presence of that small youth was a reassurance and a protection to her. A noise startled her.

"It be only the 'osses a snortin', miss," was the tranquilizing reply. "They be a-waitin' for you."

"For me? Where are we going?"

"To the gen'lman, miss—Mr. C——, as sent me to you."

There was no drawing back now. A carriage and pair stood at a little distance; into it stepped Omi, and away it drove, with the small youth beside the coachman. Every moment her courage rose higher, now that she was actually on the road to meet her dear brother and learn all. "Below," as the boy had designated the place of meeting, seemed a long way off, for they had been half an hour driving at a good pace, and were not there yet.

There was no moon, but by starlight Omi at length perceived straggling masses. A railway whistle broke on the stillness of the night. They were evidently in a village, for a sign-post stood out in the road before a large house. Then the carriage turned quickly round a lane, drew up before what looked, in that light, like a church-yard; a very humble tarred and painted wooden steeple stood out against the sky. Off jumped the boy, open flew the carriage-door, and Omi felt both her hands grasped warmly in those of a man, wrapped up, and mysterious as all the rest of this affair, as he lifted her out.

"Thank heaven! you are come," he whispered, as he drew her arm through his own and clasped her hand; "I have been in an agony of suspense."

Omi was perfectly speechless with horror and almost supernatural fear. She began to think some more than human influence was around her. This man—this stranger—who was he? Where was Charles? How did this man know her? Why was she here?

While her bewildered brain was asking all these questions, the stranger was dragging her almost up the path through the churchyard, and the poor terrified girl could not find words to remonstrate.

"You tremble, my poor child," he said, tenderly. "Fear not. I never can forget the sacrifice of this night. I know it is terribly late to bring you here, but you see you couldn't get out in the morning."

By this time they were in a small village church, at the extreme end of which a dim light was burning, just sufficient to enable them to see their way.

"Stop!" articulated Omi, trembling with fear. "What am I here for?"

"Adela, my beloved, forgive me," he whispered, encircling Omi with both arms. "Forgive my love. I cannot exist without the right to claim you on my return home from Vienna. I did not speak of this in my letter; I feared alarming you; I dreaded a refusal. But all is ready. I have a special license. You cannot, will not, allow me to leave England without a claim upon you? How you tremble! Don't be alarmed; you know you can trust me. What is done at night now for our own satisfaction and security, will be performed again in open day, to satisfy ordinary rules and custom, at the proper time."

In a moment the truth rushed through Omi's mind; she had been mistaken for Adela Letchington.

"Clever boy, that Tom," continued the gentleman, as if to amuse her mind and divert her fears. "I have only had him a week. I gave him your description, and in a twinkling he found you out."

Tom was not so much to blame, after all; for by description Adela and Omi were exactly alike in height and shape. Being such ardent friends, they as much as possible strengthened the similarity by dressing their hair alike and in the same fashion. Neither was Adela's lover to blame; for who beneath that long dark cloak and doubled vail, even though a lover, could have discovered the mistake?

But Omi was wrong—she alone—for not at once undeceiving him. Several things conspired to make her silent. She knew the original of the handsome photograph that stood before her; her love of fun, the romantic adventure, both swayed her, and, more than all else, her indignation against Adela.

Adela had deceived her, and she was the friend of her bosom! Just so much and no more had she told Omi, wherein the latter might aid her in receiving letters unknown to others. Not a word of this purposed midnight adventure; for it was evident, she thought, (through an error,) that Adela intended to keep an appointment when called upon. No one thing rouses more indignant feeling, leading too often to evil results, than the discovery, real or imaginary, of deceit in those we have loved and trusted implicitly.

CHAPTER III.—NOT FOR THE BETTER—FOR WORSE.

Omi's notions of the marriage ceremony were very vague. She stood perfectly still for a few moments with her hands clasped over both her eyes, deep—deep in thought.

Marriage! It surely couldn't be legal, entered into in another's name, and in so mysterious a manner? He had said, indeed, that it would only be binding to themselves—a barrier against the world—a tie to be subsequently securely fastened in open day. Moreover, Adela had behaved very ill to her; she would now keep her secret as her quondam friend had done hers; and what an extraordinary tissue of perplexity it would occasion both of them, Adela and her lover. The idea amused her, despite her alarm.

"Adela!"—his voice roused her—"I see you doubt my honor—my sacred promise. I vowed to you before that if you would marry me, to set at rest my fears, I would not seek you again until we met openly and fearless, when you were of age. The servant will await your return as soon as the ceremony is over, at Langley House. Before two o'clock you will be there, and I start to-morrow for Vienna."

Still Omi was silent. Could she at that moment, by a wish, have found herself at the Misses Lattimer's, and all this a dream, how joyfully would she have been there! But, amidst her other feelings, was dread—dread of this man there in that lonely church at past midnight. If she could any way get home, and he not know her, all might be well. It would be but a frolic—a form of marriage. He had said as much. She was not Adela, so he could not be legally married in that name to Omi. But she trembled now with fear at the idea of his fury, should he discover the mistake she had permitted to go so far.

"Come, my darling," he urged, folding his arms around her. "All will be well. In a year you will be twenty-one—in a year I shall return from Vienna, my mission there accomplished—and then, boldly before all the world, we will be openly united. This ceremony is only our betrothment; but," he continued, running on, to divert her mind, "my love must be most guarded and secret, and, above all, to your giddy little silly friend, Omi Devereux."

Omi started.

"What do you know of her?"

She spoke in an almost inarticulate whisper, her handkerchief before her mouth, to disguise the tones of her voice.

"Only what you yourself, darling, have told me—that she is a silly, giddy girl, who endeavors, by copying your style, to look like you. But you must not offend her, Adela; she may be useful."

"Will you swear to take me to Langley House immediately afterward?" she whispered, now trembling with anger.

"I swear it, dearest, by your dear self."

At that moment a young man in canonicals came down the aisle toward them. The stranger advanced to meet him.

A few hurried words passed between them, and the clergyman evidently strove to catch a view of Omi's face, but in vain.

"Now, darling," whispered Omi's companion, returning and taking her hand, "let us lose no more time. My friend who had promised to perform the ceremony has unavoidably been called away; but he has sent a deputy to marry us. Come."

All fear had disappeared, and Omi only felt a mixture of anger toward Adela, urging her on to do an act which necessarily must annoy, though, when explained at some future time, could not injure her; and so—thoughtlessly, wrongly, yet dreaming of no real harm to any one—Omi allowed him to lead her toward the communion rails, inside of which the clergyman stood; while Tom advanced from the shade, as one witness, and another figure, that of a young man, following the clergyman from the vestry, to make the pair of witnesses by law required.

"Keep your vail and hood close over your face," whispered the stranger.

All young ladies of seventeen, far more then than later in life, have pictured to themselves the gorgeous paraphernalia of a wedding. How, then, could Omi, naturally light of heart, see a solemn or binding form in this strange ceremony? It was fun and fear mingled, with a little bit revenge on Adela for her deceit, and upon the man for speaking ill of her; there was something to a giddy girl so very ludicrous in this mock marriage, entangling both the others in a web of their own weaving, and the whole thing so romantic; she, closely vailed and cloaked; the gentleman wrapped up, also, and his hat, which he declined removing, drawn over his eyes; the almost boyish clergyman, hurrying over the ceremony; his jovial-looking friend; and, lastly, Tom, with a grin on his face—all scarcely revealed by the light of a dim candle.

Omi shivered when she felt the ring passed on her finger, and herself pronounced that man's wife. What man's? All she knew was what Adela had told her, and that he said, "I, Cyrus, take thee, Adela, to be my wedded wife," &c., and that she followed the words dictated to her. But when all was said and the book closed, every thought, either of fun or revenge, had passed away, and Omi was silently weeping behind her thick vail. She would have given worlds to have undeceived the man beside her. It was too late. The clergyman quitted the altar, closely followed by his friend; Tom grinned broadly, and gladly the stranger whispered:

"My own wife!"

And then the clergyman, hastening toward the vestry, invited them to follow and sign the register. As he did so, by that dim light he appeared different to what he had been in the commencement—he was pale, and evidently ill at ease. He looked back, and beckoned to them. The bridegroom waved his hand, and pointed toward Omi. The clergyman entered the vestry.

"Now, my Adela," said the former, "we will hasten away. I don't want to sign a public register. This is best kept to ourselves. That signature will not more securely bind us than our mutual vows; and the witnesses would, at any time, be sufficient to prove the marriage."

Too much delighted to escape, Omi clung to his arm, and a moment of time brought them to the church door.

At that instant the clergyman looked from the vestry, and saw the door closing upon them.

"Great heavens!" he exclaimed, rushing down the aisle. "What have I done?"

Whatever he had done, it was too late to undo it, for, as he hurried out he beheld Tom scrambling up on the box, and the carriage driven away, as if long-deserted Gretna were the bourne.

Tearing off his surplice as he ran, with flying hair and heated brow, he arrived at the inn where horses for "posting" and other purposes were kept. Long and loudly he rapped.

"For mercy's sake, landlord, let me have a swift horse at once will you!" he called to a person who had slowly opened the door.

"Who for?" was the sleepy question. "Why, it's Mr. ——"

"Yes, yes, landlord," he interrupted; "you know me, I see. Let me have a horse instantly; 'tis a case of life and death."

"All right, sir; I'll be down at once."

And the window closed.

On galloped—we say galloped, but a long, far-reaching trot was the better pace which bore away the bride and bridegroom toward Langley House, while the latter clasped Omi in his arms; and now that the hat was laid aside, she, by the uncertain gleam of the carriage-lamps, through her thick doubled vail, looked up at the very handsome face gazing down lovingly upon her, to strive and read the fondness in it, although another had called it to life.

A thousand strange thoughts flitted through her mind, mingled with a wish—perhaps not unnatural to a wild, romantic girl of seventeen—that all could be real, and she the object of his love.

Once or twice he strove to raise her vail, and gently expostulated with her upon her bashfulness in holding it down.

"Well, then," he said, laughing, "I suppose I must win a husband's right to embrace you, by placing a guard over the dear little ring which binds us to one another. You may wear the guard, my Adela, but the ring must be withdrawn for one little year, mind that, dearest, for fear of Miss Lattimer's eyes, or those of the shrewd and envious Omi. I don't know why it is, my pet, but somehow, though I have never seen her, I dislike that girl."

An involuntary sigh burst from Omi. Mistaking its cause, he tenderly said;

"Come, come; no sighs now, unless they be for my departure. I will kiss it away, even through the vail. Ha!" he exclaimed, to try and divert her thoughts; "I am glad you have taken my advice, and discarded that detestable patchouli for violet, sweet violet, worthy of my bashful vailed love."

While he spoke, he was fondling her left hand, for her right tightly held down the vail.

"There, darling"—he slipped on a keeper—"now I have secured you, and this little ring you wear must be mine."

Omi had no power to resist him, so he drew off one of the ruby rings she wore, and placed it on his little finger. Then he continued:

"And here is the miniature I promised you until my return, a year hence; look upon it, and think of me. What a foolish, loving fellow I am, Adela! I who, a month since, swore I'd never marry, and your dear eyes have made me perjured! Let me see them!"

With a jerk, the vail was half raised. Omi uttered a cry of alarm.

"Eh? What's that?" he responded, still holding it in his hand, and listening. "Your ear is quicker than mine. Don't be terrified. Who can be galloping after us, and shouting so loudly? Don't be alarmed; it is some mistake."

The vail was safe again in her grasp. 'Twas the danger of her personal discovery that made her cry aloud.

The stranger let down the front glass.

"Tom, what's that?"

"Some one, Sir, a galloping like mad behind us (hit 'em hard coachee,) an' shoutin'. It's the parson, I think; he did look so scared at the church door."

"Turn round and blow out the lamps, Tom. Coachman, on for your life, and down the next lane, then stand still. He'll go by."

"I seed the parson a peerin' through the vestry door," continued Tom. "There's summat not straight, I think. Push on, coachee; lamps is out. Hit 'em hard."

They had distanced the rider behind them. Omi was almost fainting with terror. Only that now he was too anxious to do so, the vail might easily have been raised, and the trick discovered.

But it was not to be. Close beside the hedge down the lane, the carriage stood in darkness.

Nearer and nearer came the sound of the galloping horse.

Nearer still it came. 'Twas at the top of the lane. One of the carriage-horses neighed, and the rider evidently reigned in his steed, by the break in its pace.

But what so usual as for one horse in a field to neigh to another passing?

Evidently thus thought the pursuer, for down the road at an increased pace he went.

When the sounds of his horse's hoofs had died away, the stranger whispered out of the window.

"Now, coachman, on with you; tis only half a mile further. That Tom has made a mountain out of a mole-hill," he said, turning to Omi. "What would the minister ride after us for? Surely not to sign a register? Bah! where would he have got a horse in the time? 'Tis some tipsy frolic. 'Conscience makes cowards of us all.' It was, all the same, ducedly provoking that my friend Selby should have been called away. We were college chums. He is a curate at E——, and, with some difficulty, I induced him to consent to marry us secretly, by special license, after midnight, in that little old village church. He was called away on some urgent business to town three days since, and not knowing where to find me, deputed a friend to marry us, so this young fellow told me on our arrival."

While he spoke there was an aching pain at Omi's heart. The manly gentleness of his manner, his respectful kindness, good looks, all had worked upon her mind and for an instant she forgot the deception, as she asked, timidly,

"When shall I see you again?"

"It may be not for a year, my Adela. My mission peremptorily forces me to leave to-morrow; yet I go happier, now you are mine, and have forgiven me my little entrapment of you. Have you not?"

"Heaven help me!" was the strange answer, for again facts stood before her, and she dreaded to think of the result.

"My pet, don't be so sad. You know where to direct me, and tell me where and how I may safely reply to you, and whether that Omi Devereux is trustworthy. But be on your guard with her, dearest—not a word of to-night."

"If we ever meet he will dislike me," thought she, sadly. "If he only were indifferent!"

"My love, my darling, my own dear wife, here we are—here we must part. Bear up, my darling; you know my whole love is yours. One year, Adela, and then you will be really mine—mine for ever!"

Before she could resist, the vail was half raised, and his lips pressed a farewell kiss on hers. But all was dark—not even the carriage-lamps were lighted—and so the deceived and deceiving parted. The carriage had stopped some little distance from Langley House, and, supported by his arm, they approached the back door.

Again a last embrace, a timid "Farewell" from Omi, a "Good-bye, darling!" from him, two taps at the door, which opened at once, and all was over of that night's scene, save the sound of gold as it chinked in passing from the stranger's hand to that of the muffled-up maid. Omi's swift, noiseless entrance into the passage, and then the closing door, which fell like a drop-scene over the whole.

THE CAVE FIEND.

CHAPTER I.

Some five miles below Murrell's Cave, at a bend in the Ohio River, stood a cabin of considerable beauty. True, it was built of logs, but it was almost entirely overgrown with vines, concealing the rough timber of which the building was formed. And there was an arbor standing upon an elevated point also covered with vines. From this point a splendid view of the river could be had, both above and below.

The sun had disappeared from view and the bright moon was rising. Seated in the arbor, and watching the rays of the god of day and the queen of night, were two persons. The one was a man, or rather a youth, for his age could not have been more than nineteen or twenty. He was dressed in the garb peculiar to the frontier settlers, but he looked a noble youth indeed, and notwithstanding the bronze upon his face it was unusually handsome.

The young girl could not have been more than sixteen years of age. She was delicate in feature and form, while her face was as pale as the mountain lily. She sat with her eyes fixed upon the rising moon and its silvery trail across the water. For some time she had not spoken, and appeared lost in her own reflections.

At length the young man arose and advanced to her side. He remained silent and motionless for a moment, and then, laying his hand gently upon her arm, he exclaimed:

"Ruth, have you forgotten that I am here?"

The young girl started, but a smile passed over her face as she turned her blue eyes upon the hunter, and extending her hand, she replied:

"Pardon me, David. I confess that I was, for a few moments, lost in the contemplation of the beauties which surround us. But you know I have been ill for some time past, and that, while confined to the house and shut out from the beauties of Nature, she has thrown aside her Winter garb and donned the bright robe of Spring."

"I know, Ruth, and no one can feel a greater joy at your recovery than myself. But——"

"But what, David?"

"I cannot but feel that some heavy weight is resting upon your heart."

"And if there was, David?"

"I am selfish enough to wish that I was the only living being who could possibly remove it." As the young man uttered these words, he sank upon his knees before the maiden, taking both of her hands in his own. He did not drop his eyes, however, but gazed directly into hers.

Not so with the maiden. The crimson mounted into her pale face, and her lids drooped, veiling her orbs with their dark fringe. At the same time her hands trembled slightly in those of the kneeling man.

"Ruth," continued the hunter, "I do so long to have you confide in me, even as a wife would confide in her husband; and when I tell you that I love you as much as any husband could possibly love a wife, will you not repose in me that trust for which my soul yearns?"

"You love me?" repeated the girl, in low accents.

"Better than life, Ruth. Have you not long suspected such to be the fact?"

The girl remained silent for a short time, and then replied:

"I had hoped so, David."

"Then you love me, Ruth."

"Yes," was the response.

The hunter encircled the gentle creature in his arms, and both remained silent for a moment; and then he brushed back the yellow curls from her brow, and pressed his lips upon it. She raised her eyes to his own. They were full of love, confidence and hope.

"And now, dear Ruth, since from this moment you will look upon me as your best earthly friend and protector, you will certainly let me know what it is which so oppresses you."

"I should be ungenerous to keep my secret from you. And yet it may give you pain."

"Then you have a secret?"

"Yes, from you."

"So your mother intimated."

"And she gave you no idea what that secret was?"

"No. That, she said, I must learn of you. But she intimated that it was your anxiety on account of that secret which had thrown you into the fever from which you have just recovered."

"My mother was right. It was anxiety which brought on my illness."

"Let me learn the particulars at once."

"I will, for the crisis—the very hour for the fulfillment of a terrible threat is upon me."

"A terrible threat! For heaven's sake, explain, Ruth."

"You remember Murrell and his terrible band?"

"Yes. But you have nothing to fear from them. Not one of their number has been heard from in two years, and I doubt if any of them are still living."

"Listen. Three years since, a harsh-looking man came to our cabin. He paid especial attention to myself, making an effort, by kindness, to win my young heart. But the only sentiment I felt for him was that of fear. At that time he declared that in three years I should become his wife."

"The presuming rascal."

"I did not see him again for one year, and had almost forgotten his words, for it could not be expected, at my age, that they would make any very lasting impression upon me. He visited me a second time, two years ago, and swore a most terrible oath, that upon my sixteenth birthday I should become his wife."

"But you have neither seen nor heard from him since that time."

"Oh, yes. One year ago this day he came again and renewed his oath."

"Could you not have given the alarm at the time, and secured his capture?"

"No. He met me in yonder grove, and while I was alone. He told me that he was one of Murrell's band. He repeated his oath, and told me to be prepared to go with him on my sixteenth birthday."

"That is to-day."

"Yes. And he further informed me that if any opposed him, those who did so should die, be it father, mother, brother, sister, lover, neighbor or friend."

"We will see about that."

"It was this oath which has poisoned my happiness for the past year, and nearly deprived me of life."

"Dear Ruth, you must think no more of this. It was but an idle threat on the part of the villain, which he will not attempt to carry into execution. It is not likely you will ever see him again."

"Do not deceive yourself David. If I mistake not, I saw the villain this very morning."

"Where?"

"Upon the river, near the other shore."

"You were, most likely, deceived, Ruth. And, if you were not, am I not by your side?"

"Yes. But I tremble even for your safety."

"You need not, so long as I hold this good rifle in my grasp and wear this bright blade in my belt."

The young man turned his eyes in the direction of the river. A sound like the plashing of oars attracted his attention. Then came the report of a rifle, and immediately after a shriek, followed by groans. The tall trees which stood upon the river bank threw their lengthened shadows far out into the stream. This rendered any object which was floating upon the water scarcely distinguishable from the position occupied by the hunter.

Immediately after came a faint cry for help.

"Run for the house, Ruth," exclaimed the hunter. "Some person needs my assistance."

The maiden started for the cabin, while David leaped down the rocks for the water's side.

Rapidly he passed along in the direction from whence he fancied the sound came. A dark object lying upon the ground attracted his attention. He bent over it, and found that it was a human form. He was about to raise the supposed sufferer up, when the object of his attention leaped suddenly to his feet and struck a violent blow.

David, not anticipating such a movement, was not prepared for the attack, and although he made an effort to defend himself, he was not successful.

A wild wail burst upon his ears, and he heard his own name called. He knew the voice to be that of Ruth. Was she in the hands of her dreaded foe?

He answered with a single shout, and then the earth swam before his vision, the bright moon suddenly grew dark, and he fell to the earth.

And yet, for an instant, he did not lose his consciousness. He heard a mocking laugh, voices as in conversation, and then the plash of oars again in the water. He struggled to rise to his feet, as if, even in his death throes, he would save her he so fondly loved; but his strength and consciousness failed him.

CHAPTER II.

We now retrace our story. The day was drawing to a close as a little boat shot past the Murrell Cave, down the Ohio. It contained a single person—a dark man, but one clad in garments of the most approved city style—something seldom seen in that section of the country. The rower pulled for the Kentucky shore.

He had approached the cave, and made a brief examination of the interior. Then he uttered a low, but terrible oath, as he returned to his little craft, sprang into it, and pulled for the opposite shore.

He looked eagerly down the river, and then exclaimed:

"I wonder if she is there yet, and if she is expecting me? Most likely she is, and will have a score of friends and lovers to defend her. No matter. That is just what I want. I love opposition, and I prefer to meet it here. I would sooner deal with twenty frontier devils here in this forest than have one of them follow me into the city where law and its ministers are to be met with at every turn. Curse them—it was such that exterminated our band."

A frown, dark as midnight, settled upon the speaker's face, but he uttered no further words.

Soon he reached the Kentucky shore, and drawing his boat into a thicket, he set off at a rapid rate through the dense forest. He proceeded for a mile or more, when he emerged into a clearing, at the opposite side of which stood a rude cabin. It wore an air of desolation, not the slightest trace of human or animal life being visible.

Toward this cabin the stranger took his way. As he neared it he muttered:

"I wonder if old Phil Dawson is yet alive? If not, I may have trouble, for I counted much upon his assistance. Yes, there he is."

The stranger turned toward the corner of the cabin, and discovered a man engaged in mending his nets at the door.

The party so engaged heard the approaching footsteps of the stranger, and started to his feet, while a crimson glow mounted to his face. The stranger noticed this, and exclaimed:

"Why, Phil, what's the matter with you? You turn as red at my approach as a young girl at the sight of her lover. Am I not welcome?"

"Of course you're welcome, Walt Barton; but don't call me Phil Dawson here. If any one should hear you, they'd know that I once belonged to ——"

"To John A. Murrell's pirate band. Most likely they would, for you made your name notorious by your deeds of blood. But you are John Brown now, a peaceable settler. But why did you start when you first heard my approach?"

"Well, you see, Walt——"

"Don't call me Walt. Some person may overhear you and recognize me as once having belonged to the pirate band."

"But you have said that you didn't care about that."

"I don't here. And why need you?"

"For the same reason that you don't want to be exposed in the city where you live. You would be arrested there. I would be killed here unless I took myself off, and that I don't want to do, for this is my home."

"Well, you may be right, although how you can content yourself to settle down in this outlandish place is a mystery to me."

"I do it on my son's account."

"Oh, yes. Where is he?"

"Just at this present moment I can't tell. But he resides with me here."

"Well, it is still more strange that he should consent to adopt a hunter's life, as he was educated altogether in a different manner."

"I knew. Poor boy, while he was at school in Philadelphia he little dreamed that his father was one of the great Western land pirates. He could not see the human gore which stained every coin I sent him."

"And since he has been so much away from his father, he certainly cannot entertain so strong an affection for him, that he willingly foregoes all the pleasures of city life."

"If that was his only affection, perhaps he would not."

Barton started at these words, and looking earnestly into the eyes of Dawson, he asked:

"What other affection has the young man?"

Dawson thought he noticed something peculiar in the manner of Barton, as he asked the question, and with a little hesitation, replied:

"He loves this wild, dangerous life. He loves to drive the canoe over the bright waters of the Ohio, and, above all, he loves to follow the chase."

"And is there no woman or maiden whom he loves?"

"Oh, very likely."

"Who?"

"Some Indian queen, I suspect."

"Have you ever heard him speak of any female in a manner to convey the impression that he loved her."

"Never. He is a close-mouthed boy, and would scarcely tell me, even if such were the fact."

"Well, enough of this. Now to business. I have known that you have resided here for three years, and I have kept your secret."

"Yes. And this is the day I am to pay you for doing so."

"Exactly. And have you any idea what I require?"

"I have not. You said it was something which might require the shedding of blood. I fancy you have some enemy to punish, although I cannot tell why you have delayed the matter so long."

"Then I will tell you. I have been waiting until the girl reached her sixteenth birthday."

"The girl?"

"Exactly. Don't you understand?"

"Then, there is some girl you wish to carry off?"

"You have guessed it."

"Who is the maiden?"

"Her name is Ruth Mann."

IN THE WRONG BOX.

"Is there any way of getting out of this, Loo?" asked Captain Breton of Miss Louise Fairleigh, holding up a piece of glazed paper—otherwise a card—between his finger and thumb.

"Certainly not, Sir," was the reply. "You know papa is going to stand for the borough at the very next election, and if we refuse to attend the Snaggleton ball, I suspect he wouldn't have a chance. Why, all the principal voters will be stewards on the occasion."

"Yes," said the Captain: "and all dowdy wives and flashy daughters will be there with wreaths upon their heads, and——"

"Come now, I won't have you chaffing so horribly," said Louise. "You have become positively silly since your return from India."

"Indeed!" said he. "Shall I go back?"

"No—at least, not for a while," replied Louise. "But, Charley, it is settled about the ball."

"Well, I suppose it is; but on my honor, Loo, I would sooner face a cannon-ball!" said the gallant Captain, laughing heartily at his execrable pun.

"If you do that again, Charley, I will never allow you to come in here again, without I have Amy with me."

This second such a frightful threat that the Captain had to look humbled and repentant.

"I want you to be a very good boy another way," said the young lady, after a pause, during which her lover's arm had stolen fondly round her little waist. "Will you promise me?"

"First tell me what it is, Loo. You know I would do anything for you."

"This will not tax your generosity very much," said Louise. "I simply wish you not to ask me to dance at Snaggleton."

"Not ask you to dance!" said the captain; and his handsome face became troubled and curious.

"Not ask me to dance at all," repeated Louise. "And when I dance with other gentlemen, you are not to stare at them as if they were Sepoys, as you did at Mrs. Smithson's party."

"By Jove, but that's too bad, you know," said the Captain. "Now, there's a dear girl; won't you give me all the waltzes?"

"A very modest request," said Louisa. "I would have you understand I have promised papa to win five votes for him during the evening, and I don't want you to interfere with my tactics."

"But there are the quadrilles, Loo! Surely you can't diplomatize during a gallop?"

"The quadrilles, you stupid!" exclaimed Louise.

"I will undertake to achieve a support and interest every deux temps."

So the Captain, very reluctantly, had to give up this point also; but he was rewarded by being told he was an excellent fellow; and Miss Loo did not shrink away in the least when his big moustaches touched her pretty mouth.

"I shall ask some of you to lend me a trunk," said the Captain, in the course of the day. "Awkwardly enough, mine was borrowed by Fred Brown, of ours, who wanted it for his wedding tour."

"Jane has a large box to spare, and I dare say can let you have it," said Louisa. "We start to-morrow, as papa has some canvassing to do; and, oh! I was near forgetting you must wear your uniform."

"My uniform!" he exclaimed. "A dance of fire, as it was called by the Times correspondent, in a country ball-room! I shouldn't be surprised if you asked me to bring my horse next, and mount guard outside the Town Hall, in honor of the company."

"Don't be nonsensical, pray, or I might insist even on that," said Louisa. "You will be a splendid ornament to the room; and the Snaggletonians, who seldom see a real officer, will be highly flattered. Good-by, Eyes right; quick march!—and remember full regimentals."

When Captain Breton reviewed his wardrobe he found that Fred Brown had not only taken his trunk, but also his best coat. He had another suit, certainly, but nothing this spick and span to honor the occasion and please Miss Loo Fairleigh.

"If one goes in for it, one might as well go properly," he thought. "I never do the turkey-cock at tea-fights; but there's Bellamy, who gleams in scarlet and gold like the—chap in Dr. Watts."

So Captain Breton, who didn't know Byron from Tupper or Dr. Watts, but who was an excellent brave officer, strolled off toward the quarters of Cecil Bellamy, the dandy and chief lady-killer of the —th. Cecil, who was just about Breton's size, gave him eight or nine suits to choose from; and selecting a very gorgeous raiment, the Captain sent a servant to fetch it in Jane Fairleigh's box, which he had taken the precaution of bringing with him.

Next day the Fairleighs and Breton started for Snaggleton. The party consisted of Miss Fairleigh (Jane) Miss Louisa, Mr. and Mrs. Fairleigh, and little Amy, who was daisy-picker and representative of British propriety during the many strolls of the engaged pair. They arrived on Tuesday, but the ball was not to take place until Thursday.

"We must buy everything for the ball here," said Loo (who was papa's favorite, and took a great interest in the election,) "except, of course, our dresses."

Capt. Breton accompanied the ladies on some of their shopping; from which will be understood the desperate condition of spooneyism to which he was reduced.

"Charley, you are in for more trouble," said Loo to him on Wednesday. "The Jeddoes have written, asking us to dine with them to-morrow evening, and we are afterward to accompany them to the ball in their omnibus carriage. You are specially included in the note."

"Oh, I'll send and excuse. I couldn't stand it," said the Captain. "I'll take out my rod. Tell them that I am a mad fisherman, and that nothing could keep me from a trout-stream."

"Very Well," said Louisa; "but I thought you might like to come with me."

"Dearest, you know I would," said he, "but how could I manage to get you to myself among those tremendous Miss Jeddoes? Beside, I suppose you must be doing the fascinating electioneerix?"

"How sarcastic! Whatever I do shall be from my own free choice, Captain Breton," said Louisa.

"Loo, darling! why take me up so quickly? Indeed I——"

But before he could finish the sentence she was gone from the room. Could he have foreseen how they would meet again he would not have let her go so easily.

On Thursday morning the Captain hired a car from the hotel and drove to the river. After fixing his rod he commenced thrashing the stream. There was no rising in the trout. When is there rising in the trout? Do you believe the rhapsodies of Professor Wilson and Stoddart? I don't. I never found fishing to pay. Either there is rain overhead, and the day is too dark, or no rain or clouds, making it preposterously bright, or thunder in the air, or there has been frost the previous night, or a full moon last week, or the water is too low, the water is too high, the water is too muddy, or much too clear. The result of any of these conditions is—no rising in the trout! If you happen to find the river what is called by anglers "beer-color," then, indeed, you ought to prepare for a full creel; but, as far as my experience goes, even then you are liable to disappointment, and inclined to think the beer-color brings a bitterness with it very different from bass' appetizing beverage. In vain did Breton try his red hackle, and his cock's hackle, his grouse, his hare's ear, and the various other lures supposed to be irresistible; after about six hours' work a miserable sprat, whose curiosity got the better of the discretion so admirably exhibited by his companions, a troutling of tender years, laid hold of a hook well nigh as large as himself.

"I think I'll try worms," said Breton, who was really bitten with the angling mania, when the pithy significance of one of Dr. Johnson's most celebrated apothegms occurred to him, and he relinquished the idea. He fell back upon his cigar-case and the pleasure of smoking. The day was warm, and the soft grass of the stream bank deliciously cool. Listening to the drumming of a distant mill-wheel, the sob of a tiny waterfall, the dunning of gnats and cooing of ring-doves, a lark rippling the Summer air with wondrous melody, and no rising in the trout, and the cigar all right, who will be surprised that Capt. Breton fell asleep?

He woke to find a dragon fly riding upon his nose, and a bee tromboning in the centre of a honeysuckle unpleasantly close to his ear. He felt fuddled from the heat, jaded from his walk, unrefreshed by his nap, and altogether uncomfortable. It was no use trying to fish again. He had told his driver not to meet him until a certain hour, and it was a long way off yet. "Confound it, how am I to kill time?" he exclaimed.

Happy thought! He had recently read a book by which the reader learnt to derive intense amusement from the common objects of the country. The more common the object the greater the amusement. Now or never was the time to put its principles into practice. If he could only catch a frog or a toad, and watch those interesting creatures occupied in their slimy concerns! Halloa! A whopper! A regular Batracian Banting!

Capt. Breton, determined to be interested, watches the frog. The frog commences to puff himself, as if he were the proprietor of a patent medicine; he alternates this performance by collapsing with the suddenness of a bubble joint-stock company. He is evidently contemplating a movement toward the river. He disappears in a bouncing sort of flop, and the Captain is inclined to quote, not the author of the "Common Objects," but a distinguished poet, whose works are to be found upon all the tables of the aristocracy:

"The frog, the scientifickiest
Of Nature's handy work;
The frog, that neither runs nor walks,
But goes it with a jerk."

Poor Captain Breton! Three hours more to wait, and caring as little for the primroses as Peter Bell. Charming sport, trout-fishing!

The Fairleghs started from the "Snaggleton Arms" for the Jeddoes' at six o'clock, bringing their boxes, &c., with them.

The Miss Jeddoes were good country girls, who seldom got the chance of a ball, and who, when they did, considered they were bound to everything on the list of dances. They were in the greatest state of excitement about the coming event, and scarce gave the Fairleghs time to finish a cup of coffee when they hurried them off to dress.

Louisa took Amy to the room set apart for her, and put her back hair into the hands of that precocious little lady, who was chattering like a magpie behind her chair.

"I must see your dress, Loo," said she, running over to the box.

Loo was before the mirror, and exclaimed:

"Amy, dear, mind how you take it out!" Spread it on the——"

She ceased abruptly. In the glass she saw Amy holding up—not her moire, but a military dress coat.

"Oh, Loo, Loo, such fun!" she exclaimed. "You have got Captain Breton's box, and I suppose he has got yours. I must run and tell papa, and Jane, and mamma, and——"

"Be quiet, miss," interrupted Louisa; and though she felt mortified at the mistake, she could scarce refrain from laughing. The worst of it was, all the badinage it would subject her to. She put the coat back in its place, and directed Amy not to say anything about the accident; indeed, to be sure that she would not she kept her well in sight.

By-and-by Miss Jeddoe No. 1 came in, dressed in pink silk, lace trimming, and altogether thoroughly got up.

"Is it possible, Louisa, you are not ready."

"No, indeed. I am afraid I shall not be able to join you."

"Not join us! What can have happened to you?"

"Such a headache, you can't imagine! And then I forgot my dress."

"That is strange. But we can send for it."

"Oh, please, don't trouble yourself. I should not be able to go in any case. Would you get me some eau-de-cologne?" And Loo Fairleigh put her hand to her forehead in quite an invalid manner.

"Loo, what is the matter?" said her eldest sister, now entering. "Is it possible you left your box at the inn?"

"I did, Jane," she replied; but she did not say she had taken Capt. Breton's box instead.

"How sadly disappointed Breton will be!" said Miss Jane. "I thought he might be here before this for us; but I suppose he will meet us at the door," she added, as she bade Louisa good-by, and hastened away.

The carriage had rattled down the avenue, and Loo felt rather lonely as she heard the clank of the gate shutting after it. With all her anxiety about the election, she would have enjoyed a tête-à-tête and dance with Charley so much! It was partly a joke for forbidding him not to ask her for the night; why, she had him down for the very first waltz, and he waltzed beautifully! How would he manage himself, though?

Meanwhile Amy had gone to the box again, and drawn out the gorgeous uniform. She put her arms through the sleeves, and strutted about, turning to see the gilded tails which were dangling almost to the ground. She was in love with the medals on the breast. There was a tiny watch-pocket, just such a place for another nice medal. Amy's little fingers pulled something from it.

"Amy," said Loo, "you should not do that. Be quiet, child."

This latter phrase was spoken as Amy commenced running about the room and holding up in triumph a prize which she had that instant extracted from the pocket.

"See, Loo, what I have found! Such a picture, inside a gold penny! A lady as handsome as—as anything!"

"A lady! show it to me! quick, quick!" said Louisa, and with jealous haste she snatched the locket from the child.

Yes, it was a locket, set in brilliants; it contained a twist of hair, and a portrait of a lady, a splendid creature. On the reverse, in blue enamel, she read, from "Laura to C. B."

C. B. Charles Breton! The ball, the election, everything was forgotten now. How her heart throbbed wildly, and the shame tingled her cheek, as she saw the proofs of his unfaithfulness, his base, cruel infidelity! He had often told her he had no female relative, so there could be no mistake. She had loved as only woman loves once. For an hour she cried; cried until a certain dull relief came, and then a sickening resolution. She went to her desk, and began to make up a package.

THE GREAT FAMILY PAPER.

FRANK LESLIES

is the greatest literary success of the day.

THIS INTERESTING FAMILY JOURNAL, commended for its high tone, its elegant literary matter and its profuse illustrations, by the unanimous voice of the Press and by all intelligent readers, is now about to enter on its with new and most attractive features.

WITH NO. 71 TO BE ISSUED ON the 24th day of September, will be given to each purchaser and subscriber an elegant presentation plate entitled size 24 by 28 inches, from the celebrated painting by J. Neil Paton. This brilliant work of art will speak to the hearts of all, and be prized and appreciated in households throughout the land.

With the same number begins one of the most interesting serial novels which has appeared for a long time.

FRANK LESLIE'S

Chimney Corner.

The great features commending FRANK LESLIE'S CHIMNEY CORNER will be continued.

Besides a popular Serial Story, it gives attractive original stories, highly illustrated and of superior merit; its corps of contributors embracing now the most varied and brilliant talent; poetry, sketches of travel and adventure, heroic incidents in early life, sketches of the lives of self-made men, memorable women and their place in history, the wonders of nature in all her varied kingdoms, the manners and customs of different nations, all so beautifully illustrated as to make them of the highest value.
